DOOMED SLAYER PLEADS WITH GOV. COX FOR LIFE

7 REPORTS ON FRANKS SLAYERS

Defence Declares the Sanity Findings of Alienists Are Yet to Be Revealed

Chicago, July 28 (A.P.—Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the defence of Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Jr., on trial for the confessed kidnaping and slaying of Robert Franks, said today that there were seven reports of alienists intended for use of the defence.

He declared the two reports printed today were really the least important, since they were simply intended as reports on the physical condition of the youths for the alienists to work from.

It was pointed out that the reports published today contained no conclusions as to the mental conditions or capacities of the defendants.

The reports were purported to have come from Dr. Carl M. Bowman of Boston, and Dr. H. S. Hulbert of Chicago.

The fight to save the youths from the gallows went into its second week today.

GIRLS IN COURT THRONG

Over Sunday developments served to revive public interest in the proceedings before Judge Caverly and the entrance to the building and approaches to the courtroom were choked with curiosity seekers.

More than half the audience was feminine and many of the women were young.

Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney, called back to the stand Detective Sergeant Gortland, saying he wished the witness to identify some of the notes from which he read the bombshell of last Friday when he quoted Leopold as wishing to plead guilty before a "friendly judge."

The questioning had to do largely with the exact dates on which Gortland made the various memoranda. Judge Caverly frowned and shook his head as the tedious process continued. Attorneys Darrow and Crowe conferred briefly as to the purpose of the State, the former

BREAK WITH PERSIA IS THREAT

Sharp Note Demands Protection for Americans and Reparations for Imbrie

Washington, July 28 (I.N.S.)—Withdrawal of American diplomatic representatives from Persia unless that government makes adequate and prompt reparations because of the killing of Vice Consul Robert Imbie at Teheran, was threatened today by the United States in one of the most blunt and outspoken notes that has ever been issued by the State Department.

The maintenance of diplomatic relations between Persia and the United States, said the American note, are dependent upon affording of "adequate protection to their respective Nationals and to their official representatives."

The note was handed to the Persian authorities a Teheran by Joseph Solkornfeld, American minister and Consul Imbrie's immediate superior.

The American note was lengthy, but blunt. No words were minced in making it plain to Persian authorities that the United States regards the killing of Imbrie as serious and that reparations will be expected.

It was demanded that the Persian government make full and complete reparations to Mrs. Imbrie on account of the killing of her husband, that the Persian government should provide a military escort to accompany the vice consul's body to a port for transportation to the United States and that the Persian Government should pay the expenses incurred in sending a United States delegation to Persia to bring back the body.

"The government feels," the note declared, "that the continuance of its diplomatic and consular representation in Persia will be dependent upon the action which the Persian government may take in this case to vindicate the fundamental principles of international law."

Senator Faces Another Operation; Outlook Favorable for His Recovery

Shortly after noon Dr. John H. Cunningham issued the following bulletin on Senator Lodge's condition:

"Condition excellent; resting comfortably. Temperature and pulse normal. Cheerful."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who underwent a serious operation at the Charlesgate Hospital, Cambridge, was reported today as much improved.

At breakfast time, he sat up, ate two dropped eggs on toast, drank two large cups of coffee, and smoked a long cigar.

WIRE FROM COOLIDGE.

President Coolidge sent a message to Senator Lodge today in behalf of himself and Mrs. Coolidge, expressing the hope of his immediate recovery.

Besides the message from the President, there was a flood of telegrams from all sections of the country.

"Senator Lodge's temperature is normal and his pulse 78," said Dr. John H. Cunningham, who operated.

"His general condition, for a man of his years, is excellent. The outlook is very favorable. We look for him to recover."

Rushed from his home at East Point, Nahant, the Senator went almost immediately under the knife for an obstruction of the bladder.

If today's cheerful reports are confirmed and he makes as satisfactory a recovery as is expected, he will have to undergo another operation as soon as his condition warrants it. Possibly the operation will be performed within a day or two.

Senator Lodge is in his seventy-fourth year and his age is one of the principal factors of uncertainty in the case.

PLUCKY, SAYS DOCTOR.

The Senator returned to his Nahant home from Washinton about two weeks ago. At that time he was suffering from a bladder ailment and Dr. Frederick Winslow of Back Bay was in almost constant attendance upon him.

Early Sunday morning Senator Lodge's condition took a sudden change for the worse and Dr. Winslow, who was immediately summoned, decided that an operation was imperative.

At the hospital everything was in readiness when the Senator arrived and in short time after he was admitted to the institution he was removed to the operating room.

"He showed real pluck," commented Dr. Cunningham, following the operation.

Vandenhecke's Case to Be Presented by Counsel to Cox Tomorrow

A personal letter asking a reprieve was received today by Governor Cox from Cyrille J. Vandenhecke of Lawrence from his death cell at Charlestown State Prison where he is awaiting electrocution this week.

The Belgian weaver asked the Governor to consider his case and give him a chance to prove his innocence.

Attorney John P. Kane, counsel for Vandenhecke, called at the State House today and made an appointment to meet the Governor tomorrow forenoon in an effort to save his client's life.

Herman MacDonald, secretary to the Governor, told Attorney Kane that he believed the Governor would not grant a stay of execution unless something substantial was offered in the way of new evidence.

In view of this last-minute effort to save the Belgian's life, Warden William Hendry of State Prison called off the preparations to execute Vandenhecke tonight.

Until today, Vandenhecke insisted that he did not desire commutation. He insisted upon freedom or death, claiming he was innocent.

Today however, with death apparently only a few hours away, Attorney Kane prevailed upon his client to permit the request for commutation to be made.

Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller visited State Prison today and, it is understood, discussed Vandenhecke's case with Warden Hendry, although the latter denied it.

Prison officials say Vandenhecke is the most cheerful prisoner who has ever been confined to a death cell at Charlestown. He slept well

S. S. STANDISH HITS ROCKS; BEACHED

Vineyard Haven, July 28.—The passenger steamer Myles Standish, bound from here for Woods Hole, struck a rock while rounding East Chop today and sprang a leak.

She was able to reach her dock at Oak Bluffs, where her twenty-five passengers were landed and the steamer was beached.

The steamer was near shore at the time of the accident and, as it was evident that she could reach port without difficulty, there was no excitement aboard. A dense fog prevailed.

Waiting at Oak Bluffs to take the steamer to the mainland were 150 passengers, chiefly vacationists, who were forced to delay their departure for several hours until the boat from Nantucket arrived.

The Myles Standish, owned by the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, was loaned to the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard & Nantucket Steamship Company to replace the steamer Sankaty, burned at New Bedford on June 30.

ALIENISTS PREPARE SEVEN REPORTS FOR FRANKS CASE DEFENCE

RANSOM LETTERS ARE IDENTIFIED IN COURT

bobbing and starting a cross-examination.

CALL WRITING EXPERTS.

"Mr. Officer," said Mr. Darrow, "you now say those certain sheets were written July 24. You store them all at home and at the same time?"

"Yes, sir," said Oortland.

"Didn't you testify the other day that those are sheets now marked 'Exhibit 4' were written at different times?"

"I was mistaken," said Goetland.

The court was informed that the 454 sheets in question were, according to Cortland, "the outline of my testimony as prepared by me the Eight of July 24."

Harry Cotes, Mr. Crowe's private secretary, testified various state-ments he had received at the Hall La Salle on Thursday before Detective Hoy, twenty-four to thirteen hours before the first confession.

The witness was to form a basis for testimony on comparisons of handwriting it was explained.

Cotes testified that Leopold had remarked three days after these statements of handwriting were made that he had made a "big" mistake in not send "a characteristic letter V" on rids article on Thursday.

IDENTIFIES LETTERS.

Cotes next identified some specimens of Loeb's writing.

Captain William Shoemaker of the Chicago police then testified he was present when Leopold and Loeb made their confessions May 31. He identified Leopold's note-books, which were admitted in evidence. Similar notes from Loeb were put in the record.

The last attendance followed cross-examination with counsel Leopold, particularly as to his ability to write with his left hand.

Leopold replied that he could write a little with his left hand.

John Foley, a fingerprinting expert from Milwaukee, followed Hoy to the stand. He identified the original ransom letter, which he said was written by his left hand and not by his right hand.

Alienists' Reports "Mostly Piffle," Says Crowe

Chicago, July 28.—"Mostly piffle." This was Cort nonment of State Attorney Robert E. Crowe today on the report of the alienists for the defence, who will try to save Nathan F. "Babe" Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. "Dickie" Loeb from going to the scaffold for the murder of Bobby Franks.

MULFORD, AUTO RACER, IS KILLED IN WRECK

San Jose, Cal., July 28.—Death ended the career of Allen Mulford, automobile racer, here.

He was seriously injured at the Santa Clara Valley dirt grounds when he lost control of his car which plunged through a high board fence, rolled over several times and took fire.

Mulford was pinned beneath the machine.

He died a few hours later at the San Jose Hospital.

The accident was witnessed by his wife.

Loeb, at Eight, Stole Cookies to Get Thrill; Planned to Join Gang If He Could Be Leader

CHICAGO, July 28.—Here are gathered colorful incidents in the life of Richard Loeb, as he gave them to the two alienists engaged to help build a defence for the slaying of young "Bobby" Franks. Here will be found the story of the transition of Loeb from the bright boy of the Fauntleroy type, with no aptitude for learning, to Loeb, the murderer, disdainful of advice and with no other thought than to get a thrill.

Following are quoted excerpts from this alienists' report:

"THE outstanding person in his younger days who was not related to him was his governess, Miss Struthers, now Mrs. Bishop. With regard to the patient's relationship with his governess, he states that she always had a tremendous influence over him. She was a great believer in law and order. The patient states that he soon discovered that he could escape detection and the punishment by lying to her, and he soon started lying to her whenever there was a chance to escape punishment."

* * *

"HIS governess was not aware of the influence on him by Jack Mengel (Weaver), who was his chum from the age of eight to fourteen, a boy who was not wealthy and who had no governess, but who since has become a forger and is now, or was, serving time in the Federal Penitentiary when last heard of. It was from him, Loeb admits, that he gained many of his ideas for crimes."

* * *

"AT eight Loeb started stealing for a thrill. He stole a dollar from a boy next door. He stole cookies and lemonade, he stole the profits of a boyish venture into business. And his companion, Leopold, before his hands had lost their baby chubbishness, stole stamps from a playmate's collection album.

"With Leopold he burglarized fraternity houses. They stole automobiles together while at fifteen. They planned a wine burglary in Hubbard Woods together and it failed only because they could not jimmy their way in."

* * *

HIS favorite book? He doesn't remember the title. It was "The Beloved Traitor" or something like that. One of the stories, however, he'll never forget.

"It was the story of a criminal who kidnaped a little boy and held him in a padded room of an attic of the boy's home. The attic had been built for the use of an insane ancestor and one knew it existed. While hiding in the padded room, the criminal received messages from his confederate, who pased as an organ grinder, and signalled him by the tunes he played. This crime was a success. They got the ransom money. And Loeb says of this:

"I think this started me off on the whole thing."

* * *

"ALL these dashing epics of fictitious criminal cleverness made a tremendous impression. He imagined himself the great detective. Once, he 'shadowed' a poor old beggar woman, from alley to alley, from garbage can to garbage can, from back door to back door.

"For two hours, once, he followed an eccentric male beggar. He prides himself. Ah, the quarry was ignorant of his plight. Little did he know. Little did he reck. That was Loeb's dream life, acted out in real life, in make-believe. And finally—in real, real life."

* * *

"ONCE, he 'shadowed' his uncle to the uncle's home. He wore a mask, and as the uncle reached his steps he leaped out, crying:

"'Hands up!'

"The uncle, laughing, said:

"'Don't be foolish, Dickie. Run along home.'

* * *

"AT fifteen, while at Charlevoix, Mich., he had an automobile accident and suffered a concussion of the brain.

"At the age of twelve he stammered some, especially when with stammerers. For the last two or three years he has had tremors of the face which have been increasing and now are easily noticeable when he is emotional.

"The patient has always been somewhat cold-blooded. He likes Summer better than Winter. He has always wanted more blankets on the bed than the individual and says that he is always inclined to wear heavier clothing than his companions."

* * *

"HE often thought of joining a gang of desperadoes, but always hesitated because he wanted to make certain that he would be the leader, not a vassal."

4 INJURED AS 4 AUTOS PILE UP ON TURNPIKE

Car "Cutting in" Going Down Topsfield Hill Throws Following Cars Into Tangle

"Cutting in" on the steep descent of Topsfield Hill on the Newburyport turnpike today caused one automobile to leave the road and the four following to be piled up in collision with resultant injury to four persons.

A Cambridge car, riding on three shoes, one of which was flat, cut in ahead of the car driven by Alton E. Fowler of Magnolia street, Malden, in a line of traffic, and caused the Fowler car to leave the road, its rear end catching the first of a descending line of cars, piling them together.

Fowler, his wife Marion and John Maggelet of Court street, Medford, were treated at the Salem Hospital. Alvah Fowler, niso of Malden, was placed in an automobile to be rushed to a hospital, when he was again thrown to the pavement by a rear-end collision before the machine left the scene. He was treated at the Lynn Hospital.

Slayers Lack God, Not Glands, Says College Head

Portland, Me., July 28.—President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College addressing the men's class of Immanuel Baptist Church, on the murder trial in Chicago, said:

"It is easy to declare that Leopold and Loeb are abnormal persons. One of them admits conscience dropped out of his life when he stopped going to a religious school of his race at eight years of age. Has there been no home influence since? Can a young man go through preparatory school and university without ethical training?

"It is said they are deficient in certain glands. What they lack is God, not glands.

"How many other Loebs and Leopolds are growing up? Are we Americans substituting 'gland morality' for God?"

New York, July 28.—Three men were arrested by police today in the robbery last March of George Hoenig, a Fulton street, jeweler, who was attacked and beaten unconscious in a Broadway theatre building by robbers who escaped with $30,000 worth of diamonds and platinum. BOY CHOKES FATHER IN COURT

Compelled to choose between his father and his mother today, twelve-year-old Edmund Ross said, "I want to go with daddy."

It was in the East Cambridge Court. Alexander Ross, the father, had just been arraigned for non-support.

Taking the boy's hand, he started down the corridor in triumph. The mother followed, alternately scolding and crying.

At the door father and mother passed roughly from domination to fisticuffs and the boy was pulled first one way and then the other by his warring parents.

His cries brought court attendants to the scene. One succeeded in separating the excited parents and helping the frightened boy to rearrange his clothing.

Mrs. Ross told the police that her husband had struck her. The police decided both father and mother were to blame for the row.

Again the boy was given the choice of accompanying his father or his mother. He again elected to accompany his dad, and they departed, hand in hand.

Ross, the elder, was arrested in Medford on an old charge of non-support of two children. His first wife was the complainant. His second wife, whom he married recently in Detroit, accompanied him in court.

It was testified in court that he had failed to pay $8 a week toward the support of his children, as ordered by the court. He was warned that he must keep up his payments.

Mrs. Ross, the second, saw the fight between her predecessor and her husband, and the police said she took a hand in it.

It was intimated that the Ross boy would be returned to his mother later in the day, as she claims legal custody.

2 DEPARTMENTS ROW OVER FREE SHOWER BATHS

When those who live in the vicinity of the Copley School, Bartlett street, Charlestown, occupied the new bath house in the building, they did they think that the School Department was taxing the Park Department about a dollar a head for the privilege.

Both departments have been at loggerheads over the matter for some time. The situation was brought to a head today, when a conference was called at the Mayor's office where the difficulties were adjusted.

The school department contended that the park department should pay for the janitor service, fuel and light while the building was being used by the public for shower bath purposes.

The park department objected and the breach between the two departments reached such a stage that it looked for a time as if there would be no showers for the people of the district.

Through Mayor Curley a solution was agreed upon today, so that people of the district may receive the benefits of the bath facilities at a reasonable cost to the park department.

KLANSMEN DEMAND BERLIN POLICE PROTECT THEIR MEETINGS

NOTICE IS GIVEN TO CHIEF

Official Takes Up Matter With District Attorney; Has Too Few Officers for Job

Worcester, July 28.—Ku Klux Klansmen have served notice on Chief of Police Cole of the town of Berlin that they want better police protection for their meetings.

Chief Cole came here today to put the matter up to District Attorney Baker.

He has not sufficient officers at his disposal to properly police the numerous meetings held in and around Berlin late at night and early in the morning.

The last few meetings have ended in sporadic violence, with friends and foes of the Klan fighting it out singly and in small groups, with rocks, bricks and clubs as weapons.

In their latest ultimatum, it is understood, the leaders of the Klan notified Cole that if interference does not stop they will protect themselves and will mobilize brigades of stone-throwers to keep undesirables out.

Something like civil war on a small scale would result, the chief fears, and he has no solution for the problem.

The Klan has invited State police to attend branch meetings in and near Berlin, it is rumored. The constabulary have declined, feeling that to accept would be to seem to align themselves with the klansmen.

The most serious anti-Klan outbreak was that of two weeks ago, when close to 100 men, armed with stones and brickbats, attempted too break up a meeting in a field.

Until today there has been much mystery as to the manner in which the foes of the Klan got word of the meeting.

It has been established, according to Chief Cole, that certain young men got the information from an ice-cream dealer in Clinton by representing themselves as emissaries of a well-known klansman in Westboro.

HOW FUR THIEVES GOT AWAY WITH LOOT

HOLE IN FLOOR MADE JOB EASY

The most valuable pieces at the Kalkas store in Boylston street were on the second floor. So the robbers cut a hole through from the floor above. Inspector Joseph Rollins is looking over the job, which was so well done the burglar alarm wires were not disturbed.

$100,000 FURS STOLEN IN BACK BAY

Thieves Saw Way Into Store on Boylston Street and Carry Off Stock

Thieves sawed their way through the rear door of Edward F. Kalkas Sons' fur shop, No. 364 Boylston street, and stole $100,000 worth of furs.

The robbery was discovered when employes reported for work today.

The thieves were clever. They sawed a small hole in the door, inserted a hand and opened the door. Then they replaced the wood with a piece of cardboard of the same color and size. To the casual observer the door looked untouched.

The most valuable furs were on the second floor. The door to that was locked. The thieves sawed a hole through the ceiling about three feet in diameter. Then they cleverly sawed around the burglar alarm wires putting all danger from these out of the question.

Then followed the looting of the fur store. Apparently the thieves had a truck waiting at the rear door, and after passing the furs through the hole in the ceiling they were loaded on the waiting truck.

The fur thieves apparently had the robbery well planned, for they made their break at a time when the fur shop was stocked to the roof, figuratively, with furs in preparation for the annual August fur sales.

MAY EVACUATE ALL GERMAN TERRITORY

Plans Discussed at Today's Session of Heads of the Allied Delegations

London, July 28 (I.N.S.).—Plans for evacuation of all occupied German territory, including the Ruhr, were discussed today by the delegates to the three-sided Reparations Conference. Heads of the various delegations met at noon, preliminary to the afternoon session. Later in the day, new peace progress toward important decisions which may divide the fate of the parley.

The first committee met to draft an amended report which it was understood would recommend to the international turning points regarding guarantees for the proposed $200,000,000 German loan.

It is said an invitation will be extended to the Germans to enter the parley once a basis of equality is formulated. It has been given to French circles that Premier Herriot of France was ready to make further concessions and to promise that France would not take independent action in the future in enforcing sanctions."

There has been an appreciable lessening of pressure upon Premier Herriot from Paris.

Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes is awaited here shortly, when he is expected to confer with former Premier Raymond Poincare, leader of the irreconcilable anti-German group.

Secretary Hughes will outline America's attitude toward the negotiations of the Dawes reparation plan and try to persuade Poincare to give more support to Premier Herriot than he has heretofore.

WIFE IN DEAD BABY MYSTERY DROPS SUIT

Tacoma, Wash., July 28.—The divorce suit filed against Kenneth R. MacLean, student of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., by Nettie Volk MacLean, child wife, who figured in the death of the MacLean baby last February, has been withdrawn on the motion of Mrs. MacLean.

The reason advanced by attorneys was that the expense of obtaining evidence in Maine is too heavy. No reconciliation is to be effected, it is decided.

A suit for alienation of affection brought by Mrs. MacLean for $15,000 against Mr. and Mrs. A. R. MacLean, parents of Kenneth, still is pending.

K. R. MacLean Nettie MacLean

A last-year bill was returned by the Maine Grand Jury when the hearing was held there to fix the blame for the baby's death upon either or both of the MacLeans. However, in her divorce papers, now withdrawn, Mrs. MacLean charged her husband with smothering the year-old child.

The child was smothered at the Hotel Eagle, Brunswick between the youthful parents. Mrs. MacLean had followed her husband across teh continent to show him the baby. He warned her to keep the news of their marriage from his classmates.

Mrs. MacLean is the daughter of Oscar P. Volk of Tacoma. McLean's father managed a large chain of stores in the West. Mrs. MacLean was considered one of the prettiest girls in the Tacoma High School when she left to become McLean's wife a year ago last September.

It was a real love match.

RAIL MEN STAY AWAY FROM HEARING

Brotherhoods Say U. S. Labor Board Can't Force Hearing of Wage Dispute

Chicago, July 28.—Members of the railway labor board at the opening of the hearing today in the controversy between the two railroad brotherhoods and the western carriers over wage increases and changes in working rules were armed with legal opinions and court rulings with which they will attempt to establish their right to summon parties to the dispute before the board and demand that they submit their case to the jurisdiction of the governmental tribunal.

The hearing was postponed upon the initiative of the board in order to allow the carriers additional time to prepare statistics and data on the rules involved in the controversy. There was no representative of the labor brotherhoods involved before the board today.

The two brotherhoods formally notified the board that they would not submit testimony in the case. It was the contention of the labor organization that the board had no authority to assume jurisdiction of the dispute without the consent of both parties to the controversy.

The brotherhoods held that no suspension of transportation was imminent and asked further time for direct conference. After a brief extension of time the board subpoenaed all parties.

'Buzz' Henry and Bride of the Younger Set Sail for Europe

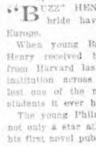
By BETTY ALDEN.

"BUZZ" HENRY and his bride have sailed for Europe.

When young Barklie McKee Henry received his sheepskin from Harvard last month, the institution across the Charles lost one of the most versatile students it ever had.

The young Philadelphian was not only a star athlete, but had his first novel published just recently. The name of the volume is "Deceit," being a tale of love wherein society plays an important part.

Henry was captain of the Crimson crew this year and decidedly popular among his classmates. He was second marshal of the senior class, president of the junior class, president of the Hasty Pudding Club and undergraduate president of the Hasty Pudding Club. He was "Ibis" of the Harvard Lampoon and in collaboration with Frederick M. Nichols, he wore "Take a Brace," last Spring's Pudding Show.



Mrs. Barklie McK. Henry

On June 5 society of several cities made its way to Roslyn, L. I., for the wedding which united young Henry and Miss Barbara Whitney, daughter of the Henry Payne Whitneys and granddaughter of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The young people have sailed for England, where the author of "Deceit" will spend two years studying at Balliol College, Oxford.

Angelica and Janet Welldon are among the youthful misses of the "younger set" spending the Summer at Ipswich. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Welldon of New York.

AMONG society's future debutantes who dig in the sands along the North Shore are little Angelica and Janet Welldon, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Welldon (Julia Hoyt) of New York.

Mrs. Welldon and the children are at Ipswich with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald T. Hoyt, who have but recently returned from abroad. Mr. Welldon, who is still in New York, will come to Ipswich next month.

MRS. JOHN B. WALLER is received a very glad welcome when she arrived in Manchester the other day. The former Agnes Means is to remain for the rest of the season at "Meadow Lodge," the estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Means.

Lieutenant Waller, U. S. Navy, came up from Washington with his wife, but he has returned to Washington to resume his duties. He will return for another visit to the Shore later on.

SIDEWALK DRINK STANDS HAVE DIRTY GLASSES

Health Board Warns Public Many Establishments Are Not Sanitary

Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, Boston health commissioner, today calls particular attention of the public to the condition of the glasses in which soft drinks are served on sidewalk stands and in open windows and doorways.

This is part of the Health Department's crusade to rid Boston of unsanitary soda fountains and soft drink establishments. Dr. Patrick H. Mullowney, deputy health commissioner, in charge of the food division of the Health Department, has a case pending in court against the proprietor of a window soda fountain for serving a beverage in an unclean glass.

Dr. Mahoney has given his sanction for the prosecution of every violator of the law regarding unclean soda fountains and soft drink places.

PERIL TO CHILDREN.

When business is brisk at some sidewalk and open window and doorway soft drink stands, unclean glasses and glasses that have not been sterilized after previous use by a customer are used over and over again for the service of beverages.

Here is a case where the children are to be taken into consideration. They will rush to such an establishment on a hot day and partake of soda and tonic without thinking to see if the glass served them is clean or not.

The same glass served to one child can is often passed on to a score of others. This is just what the health department means to stamp out, the habit of not sterilizing used glasses. A strict penalty goes with a violation of the rule.

In the opinion of Drs Mahoney and Mullowney a thorough sterilization of glasses, even with hot water, cannot be maintained in these open window soda and tonic stands.

The proper way to serve beverages from these places, they claim, is in paper cups, for individual use and not to be served over again.

SAMPLES OF SYRUPS

The food division of the health department is stocked with samples of syrups and tonics taken from soda fountains and open stands since the drive was ordered by Commissioner Mahoney.

Cans of syrups used in the mixture of soft drinks show prominently "sweating" and "swelling" all outward signs of being unfit for food materials.

Whether or not the contents contain deadly bacteria will be determined by Dr. Karl R. Bailey, deputy health commissioner in charge of the laboratory division.

Any readers of the American noticing unsanitary conditions at any soda fountain are requested to notify the City Editor of the Boston American.

Diphtheria Warning For Tots by State Health Board

Children under school age are practically all susceptible to diphtheria. Diphtheria, if contracted at this time, is very fatal. For this reason the Massachusetts Department of Public Health recommends immunizing all children under school age.

Children of school age should be given the Schick test, which tells whether or not they can get diphtheria, if exposed to it. If they are susceptible, they should then be immunized, says the State Health Department.

159 LIVES LOST IN WRECK OF JAP SHIP

Only Eighteen Passengers and Five of Crew Survive

Tokio, July 28 (A.P.)—One hundred and fifty-nine persons were drowned in the wreck of the steamship Taifei Maru off Cape Notoro, northeast of Hookkaido, says a dispatch to the Asahi, a Tokio newspaper. All aboard were Japanese.

The Taifei Maru, 1,240 tons nominally a freight ship, was carrying 138 passengers besides the crew of 54. She is operated by the North Japan Steamship Company between the Island of Saghalien and Hookkaido, northernmost of the main Japanese islands.

She was bound for Otaru.

Eighteen passengers and five members of the crew survived, reaching Toyohara in lifeboats.

The Asahi's despatch says the wreck was due to a collision with the Kamikura Maru, but advices to the Nichi declare it was due to striking rocks.

BONUS QUERIES WELCOMED BY AMERICAN

There isn't a reason in the world why veterans of the World War should be unable to make out his adjusted compensation application.

The questions that trouble every inquirer by the American-Advertiser's Soldiers' Friend Bureau at this office.

It isn't even necessary for the busy ex-soldier to make a personal visit, although veteran visitors are always welcome.

Just pen a few lines, drop them into the nearest mail box, and Uncle Sam will see that they are delivered to the staff of experts at the Soldiers' Friend Bureau conducted by the American and Advertiser.

A letter will save any wasting and will result in obtaining just as complete advice as would a visit.

Here are a few of the letters and answers:

MRS. R. D. S., Medford.

Q.—My brother served in the World War from 1916 to 1918, my mother, a helpless cripple, being dependent upon him at all times. After the war he married but did not live with his wife and has since died. Is my mother or his wife entitled to the bonus?

A.—If your brother was not living with his wife as man and wife at the time of his death, your mother would be entitled to the benefits from the bonus act. She should file an application as soon as possible.

W. P. C., Hampstead, N. H.

Q.—Does an ex-service man drawing a compensation of $70 a month for disability come under this bonus bill?

A.—A veteran of the World War may receive the benefits of this bonus act, although he is drawing compensation from the government. The bonus is in addition to all other benefits which a veteran is now receiving.

F. D. B., DANIELSON, CT.

Q.—I enlisted August 26, 1918, and was discharged January 17, 1919, my service being in the United States. What would the amount of my insurance policy be?

A.—This amount cannot be computed exactly as your age is not given, but the amount of your insurance policy will be approximately $200.

VETERAN'S MOTHER, LAWRENCE.

Q.—My boy enlisted July 24, 1917, and left for Syracuse on July 28, 1917, stayed there three weeks and went to France, where he was killed, October 4, 1918. I am a dependent. Am I entitled to the bonus, and if so, how much?

A.—If your son left no wife or children under eighteen years of age, you will be entitled to apply for the bonus, which will amount to about $525, payable in ten equal quarterly installments, the first installment to be payable after March, 1925.

H. R. W., HAVERHILL.

Q.—I was on active duty in the Navy from April 6, 1917 to September 10, 1919 with part overseas service. What would be the amount of my bonus?

A.—You will receive approximately $1,600 in the form of a 20-year endowment insurance policy, based on a maximum service credit of about $625.

H. T., WOONSOCKET.

Q.—I enlisted in the United States Navy December 17, 1917 and was discharged December 3, 1919 with overseas service in the mine laying and mine sweeping forces. What would be the amount of my bonus?

A.—You will be entitled to the maximum credit of $625 under the bonus law, and the 20 year paid up certificate which you will receive will have a face value of about $1,560.

MRS. L. S., ANDOVER, CT.

Q.—Will a mother whose son died overseas receive the bonus? She is receiving the $10,000 insurance which he carried.

A.—If the dead son left no wife or children under eighteen years of age, and if a mother was dependent upon him at the time of his death, she will receive the benefits of the bonus. The receipt of the other $10,000 insurance in no way bars her from obtaining the benefits of the new bonus law.

MRS. M. W. B., ROCHESTER, N. H.

Q.—How should a female reservist, who since her discharge has married, sign her name to the application blank?

A.—She should sign her name as it was when she was in the service. In the question on the bonus application calling for remarks she may state the fact that she is now married and give her married name.

A. E. B., MILLIS.

Q.—I enlisted in the Naval Reserve Force, June 4, 1918, was released December 4, 1918, and received my discharge September 30, 1921. Do I figure my bonus to the date of my discharge or to the date of my release?

A.—Your bonus will be computed from the date you were called to active duty to the date of your release from active duty, which must not be figured beyond July 1, 1919.

NEW ENGLAND SLOGANS ARE FULL OF PEP

"Patronize New England Products and prosper!"

There's one with a wallop.

It was coined by Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird and she doesn't need the money. But Mrs. Bird, like all public-spirited men and women, is intensely interested in the success of New England week, to be staged in Boston September 13-20.

Here's a chance to make vacation money. The New England Week Slogan Committee is offering a $100 prize for the catchiest and most expressive grouping of words emphasizing the advantages of selling New England to New England.

Slogans must be limited to ten words and the shorter the better. Contestants should put pep and punch into them. It's an opportunity to win money and help boost New England.

Slogans are pouring into the committee headquarters. They must be addressed to "New England Week Slogan Committee, Room 410, Chamber of Commerce Building, No. 80 Federal street, Boston, Mass."

Each slogan must be accompanied by the writer's explanation, of not more than fifty words, why the slogans should be selected.

Here are a few samples submitted to date:

"Buy Our Own Sales Buy New England Makes."

"Don't Be a Slacker—Be a New England Backer."

"The Brain and Brawn of New England Knows No Defeat."

"New England Made Means Worth Price Paid."

"Buying New England Is Selling New England."

"New England Makes; the World Takes."

"Buy New England Made and Boost Our Trade."

"Pay It With New England Made Goods."

"Come to New England for Health, Wealth and Happiness."

"New England Makes the Best, Why Not Buy the Best."

Get busy with a slogan. The contest closes August 1.

Coolidge Scored by Pastor for Placing God Third in List

Atlanta, Ga., July 28.—In a sermon preached at Central Baptist Church here Rev. W. L. Hamilton, the pastor, scored President Coolidge for having "placed God third" in his radio address to boy scouts, urging the youths to reverence, "first, nature; second, law; third, God."

"During the World War we justly criticized and condemned the Kaiser for referring to God as secondary—'Me and God'," the pastor is quoted as saying, "but last Friday our own President took the liberty of moving God down a step further and put him in third place."

Odd facts about Corns

End them this new way

SINCE man started to wear shoes his feet have hurt him. Scores of ways to end corns have been tried. Most are alike. Blue-jay is scientifically different, quick, safe; the discovery of a noted scientist. It stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes off. That's all—no dangerous paring. Use it tonight, walk in comfort tomorrow. Your druggist has it.

FARMERS HARD HIT BY DRY, HOT SPELL

Tobacco Growers in Connecticut Valley Face Loss of $1,000,000

Bay State farmers are praying for rain.

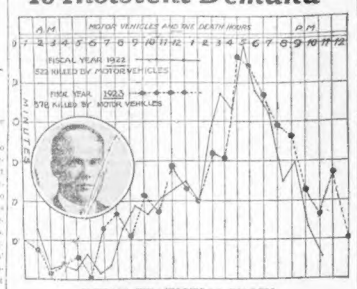
Loss of more than $1,000,000 to tobacco growers in the western sections of the State since the current dry period began and further threatened losses of at least $10,000,000 to crops in this state unless heavy rains fall this week, is the report and prediction of State agricultural officials.

President J. W. Ashley of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Growers' Association stated today that the tobacco planters are facing 50 per cent losses if no rain falls this week.

Other crops are suffering from the long drought in the western part of the State.

W. A. Munson, State director of markets, after a three-day survey of conditions throughout the State, said today that pastures are drying up, water supplies are getting low and that from the best apple sections of the State, reports are coming which indicate that this season's fruit will be smaller than in years, because of lack of moisture.

Stop Killings by Autos, Is Insistent Demand



WHAT STATISTICS SHOW

Chart prepared by Frank A. Goodwin, State registrar of vehicles, showing that 5 p. m. was the peak hour for fatal automobile accidents in 1922 and 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. in 1923, according to daily averages. Inset, is of Registrar Goodwin.

By BERT FORD

Five hundred and seventy-eight persons were killed by automobiles in Massachusetts last year.

In the same twelve months 16,217 persons were injured.

Of the 578 killed 223 were children. The number of children injured was 4,937.

The lives of fifty-nine girls were crushed out and the lives of 164 boys. The girls injured totalled 164 and the boys injured, numbered 3,500.

A terrible toll.

What are you going to do about it, Mr. Motorist?

And what are you going to about it, Mr. Pedestrian?

The responsibility is mutual.

The big error in the past has been the notion that it is all up to the person driving an automobile.

UP TO INDIVIDUAL.

The pedestrian has gone stumbling and blundering along, supposing that the fellow in the car must exercise all the care. The sooner this fallacy is banished from the public mind the better for the community.

Studied from a variety of angles the inevitable conclusion is that the motor mishap problem is one that must be solved by the individual.

Every person must do his part.

It is a problem that concerns every man, woman and child in the Commonwealth.

No more vital issue exists at present.

Auto casualties prove the seriousness of the situation. It is up to everybody to help reduce the evil. The "Let George do it" doesn't apply. It is YOUR JOB.

Students of the condition say that preventive measures demand team work and eternal vigilance—by the person at the wheel and by the person in the street.

Individual caution and individual responsibility are the keynotes of all motor safety drives.

If motorists, ever conscious of individual care, would refrain from overspeeding, cutting in, passing halted trolleys on the left side, turning corners sharply and crossing intersecting streets without slowing up or sounding horns, there would be an immediate reduction in casualties.

PEAK HOUR 5 P.M.

If, on the other hand, and it is every bit as imperative, pedestrians would train themselves to look both ways before crossing streets heeded the traffic cop's signal, and instructed children not to roller skate or coast on busy streets results would be correspondingly beneficial.

Remember that it isn't a matter of sentiment. Rather is it a matter of common sense and duty—duty to yourself and to the other fellow.

Frank A. Goodwin, State registrar of motor vehicles, who has been in the front rank since 1920 in the safety drive, has put a point to day that has been seldom if ever emphasized. Said he:

"While legally the greater responsibility lies with the person driving an automobile, pedestrians are too apt to forget their share of responsibility.

"For example on a rainy day everybody knows it is more difficult to stop a car, and, as a result, the person on foot ought to be just that more cautious and try to help out.

"We have no end of experts suggest mechanical devices to reduce motor accidents. I tell them all it is a matter of mind and not of mechanical appliances. People must be educated to realize that they should help by unflagging care to minimize the danger. Get them into that frame of mind and we'll be infinitely better able to cope with the situation."

Registrar Goodwin's statistical department at Commonwealth Pier is crowded over by C. G. Hubbard, a mine of facts, figures and comparisons. Observations made by Registrar Goodwin and remedies suggested by him have been adopted all over the country.

If accident indifferent or careless motorist or pedestrian should take the trouble to drop into the statistical department and ask a few questions he would depart vowing to do his share to promote greater general safety.

He would discover that most of the fatal automobile accidents have been around 5 p.m. Yearly averages reduced to charts shows 5 p.m. to be the peak hour. The 1922 chart showed that the majority of the 522 persons killed by automobiles were killed at 5 p.m., and the chart for 1923 showed that the peak shifted a half hour early.

Mr. Goodwin explained that this was due to the haste and carelessness of the rush hour. He said drivers of trucks and other motor vehicles are in a hurry to get home and that toilers are equally incautious at that hour.

BIG SAVING BY SUPERPOWER IN NEW ENGLAND

Report Shows How 50,000,000 Tons of Coal Can Be Conserved in East

Recommendations which would result in the annual saving of 50,000,000 tons of coal, the lowering of power costs and the extension of electricity to the farms are made in a report submitted by the subcommittee of engineers of the Northeastern Superpower Committee.

Massachusetts, Maine, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia are the territories affected.

Henry C. Atwell, chairman of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, is the Bay State representative on the major committee. Harold K. Barrows acted on the subcommittee.

The engineers suggest that large steam plants be constructed at strategic points; that there be a system of interconnection between different plants, and that hydro-electric plants be developed.

The Northeastern Superpower Committee was formed as a result of a conference between representatives of eleven northeastern states and Secretary Hoover last October.

President Coolidge gave the project active support and has taken a lively interest in the progress of the plan.

Forty per cent. of the country's population live in the eleven States interested in the superpower scheme. The section consumes 50 per cent. of the nation's electric power and generates 60 per cent. of the primary power of the United States.

The report says in part:

"There are in this area 200 utility companies engaged in power production and distribution. Great economies could be effected by the interconnection of these systems, in some cases by higher voltage transmission."

The New Englanders on the subcommittee of engineers are: William M. Black of Maine, John W. Stevens of New Hampshire, Ryland L. Lockwood of Vermont, David Isay of Rhode Island, A. E. L. Knowlton of Connecticut, and Mr. Barrows.

BOY WANDERER PUZZLES POLICE

Gets Lost and Escapes One Get Into Another Police Station Only to

"I got a poor memory. That's all."

And so it was all that his father, police or City Hospital physicians could get from Francis McNab of Roxbury, the boy who had been them puzzled for days, when he was identified by the father.

The boy has been in and out of police hands twice and told so many conflicting stories that the police admitted they didn't know what it was all about.

He was picked up Thursday while wandering in Roxbury, but climbed through a window at the Dudley street station and escaped. Next he was found wandering in Dorchester. At both police stations he told many conflicting stories about himself, but insisted his name was McNally.

Worry, the Dragon

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

Work's a Mere Mouse in Comparison

WORRY—that word that can give a fellow a fretful sensation by just its pronouncement—Worry, in comparison to Work, is a dragon beside a field mouse. The dragon comes forth, as the ancient ones did, periodically, to harass the countryside, to pester and make light the sleep of the honest worker, to carry off the youth of the land and turn them into the aged. Men have died," but not from love or work! But plenty of folks grow wrinkles and carry an old man of the sea on their backs, and lay awake in their beds of nights, and die because of the bad magic of worry.

If some perfect gentle knight could ride out of the veil tomorrow and slay this harrier for the world we should live a fairy-tale more marvelous than any ever dreamed or written.

Some day maybe a perfect government, the thing we dream of, the same government that will be in the hands of men of pity who will not allow a child to work, will be that Parfait Gentil Knight without reproach who will find some way to kill the dragon, WORRY—for the world.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

UNLUCKY IN LOVE

By Beatrice Fairfax

"I'M always unlucky in love," writes Hernice. "My first beau was killed in the war. My second couldn't make a living for himself and had to give me up and go to South America to start over. And now, I'm in love with a man who has been separated from his wife for three years, and who longs for his freedom, but who can't get it. I'm twenty-five, and I'm beginning to feel that all I have to do is get fond of a man in order to have some jinx come and make it impossible for me to marry him and be happy. Do you see any way for me to change my luck?"

No one has to change her luck, Hernice. She has only to change her belief about it. Just realize that experience is useful, and that suffering is nothing but growing pains. Don't mind having your soul expand, but be careful that you don't get a martyr-complex or a resignation attitude.

PARIS SENDS NEW IDEAS

Printed crepes of every type imaginable are being worn now that Summer weather has descended upon Paris. At the left is shown a simple crepe de Chine frock set forth in several shades of green and gray on a darker green ground. The whole garment is very plain and semi-tailored, a one-piece frock with a narrow belt of leather. The bodice opens at the front to form a shallow, tailored collar turning back from the V-shaped decolletage. Pull buttons in antique silver give a touch of elegance to the modest little garment. The clasp on the leather belt is likewise of wrought silver to match. The band trimming on the bodice, sleeves and skirt is of plain green crepe. A scarf of similar crepe in one tone may be worn with the frock.

The unusual gown thown in the other sketch is exceedingly smart and quite new in conception. It is of black crepe de Chine bordered with white organdie, and most cleverly draped at the front of the skirt. The whole frock is cut on the bias and the vast amount of fullness which forms the drapery at the front is gathered beneath a bid belt of hunter's green embossed with gold.

Making Girls Happy

By W. A. McKEEVER

Noted Lecturer and Authority on Educational and Sociological Subjects.

"WHAT can one do for the entertainment of seven-year-old girls? Can you suggest anything specially new?" Thus an inquiry raises an important question, and my answer is, have a doll party.

I have just now stopped to inspect one of these "perfectly delightful" affairs and can say that it was far more valuable for the girls of the age involved—six to eight—than anything in the nature of a pink tea or a dancing party.

What is the method of the kitten party, you ask? Well, each girl had a doll, or borrowed one, and she brings it to the party wearing a dainty dress made with her own fingers.

Give your girl something of her very own to do and her tongue will loose in conversation. People grow stupid from doing things they hate and from being repressed from the things they love.

Keep your little girl's mind off herself. Find something for her hands to create and that will bring her into contact with others of her class engaged in the same thing.

Much of the jealousy, hatred and other agony which eats at the heart of woman today had its origin in childhood, and premature social training is one of these evils. I earnestly protest against introducing even the forms of social adult society into the mind and practice of pre-adolescent girls.

OH! NO! NO!

Now milady, it seems, for most every event
Has appropriate forms of attire.
To be saved from a blaze she would never consent
If not suitably dressed for a fire!

HOW TO REDUCE

By Maria Jeritza

Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day

HAVE you ever stood full length before your mirror immediately upon emerging from your bath and in an impersonal, unprejudiced way, judged your appearance?

I am going to wager that in case your work keeps you sitting at your desk for long hours each day, you were not entirely pleased with the result of this critical self-inspection. It is possible that you felt forced to conclude that your size about the waist and hips was greater than it should be.

There may have been too great heaviness about your shoulders and upper arms, also, but I shall not go into that subject now. Rather I shall suggest to you, if I may, ways of reducing your hips to proportions of symmetry. And, of course, that means exercise taken regularly every day.

Exercise will do more than reduce your hips by increasing the energy of your circulation. It will also limber your muscles, and that, in turn, will give you a graceful carriage. And a graceful, alert carriage is fully half of beauty.

Within reasonable limits weight and size are matters of individuality. Do not worry if you are just a few pounds heavier or lighter than standards of weights and measurements would advocate for you. Keep well and active and don't worry. And always carry yourself with the light alertness and spontaneous grace that bespeak active muscles and the alert mental poise.

Here is an admirable exercise for attaining symmetrical hips.

Stand straight with your heels together, your arms at your sides. Then bend your right knee and touch the toes of your right foot with your right hand, swinging your left arm straight up above your head. Repeat this exercise ten times. Reverse it—that is, bend your left knee and touch your left toes with your left hand ten times.

Practiced faithfully every morning for several weeks, this exercise will help you greatly toward a graceful carriage. Practiced daily for ten months it should beautifully slenderize your hips and sides.

Always use enough Rinso to get creamy lasting suds after the clothes are in

Honest Pride in their fresh clean clothes

-so easy now to keep them spotless!

SCHOOL and party dresses, even everyday rompers and play-things—you love to have them clean and dainty when the children are under the friendly but critical eyes of neighbors.

Today you do not have to pay the price you used to pay for cleanliness—today you can have a snowy wash and still keep your energy, your spirit.

A new kind of laundry soap now saves you the hardest work of wash day, the old constant rubbing.

RINSO is not "just a new soap"—it is an entirely new kind of soap—creamy white in color, fine and made especially to do the family wash more easily than ever. It dissolves quickly and completely in boiling water, and gently penetrates every thread of the clothes with its rich soapsuds.

Now the grimiest of play clothes, the meanest of cuff-edges, neckbands or hems need only a light rubbing between your fingers with dry Rinso. This loosens even the deepest hid dirt.

Then good thorough rinsing carries away the loosened dirt and all the soap solution, too. No bits of soap left to stick to your garments.

Women find that the qualities that make Rinso so wonderful in the laundry also make it a fine household soap. "The magic-like way it cleans enameled surfaces," says one; "wonderful for floors and linoleum," says another. "At last something that does not hurt my hands," writes a third. A fourth says, "The most satisfactory thing for washing dishes, pots and pans. I use it, too, on woodwork and for general cleaning."

SEQUEL OF CHICKIE

By Elenore Meherin

Intriguing and Refreshingly Blunt Story of the Soul-Racking Troubles Love Brought to Pretty Boston Girl

EDITH'S hand flew out—went ripping in a white anger sharp and full in Chickie's face.

The flashing moment quivered through the room, burning with humiliation and anger. Chickie's head swept down—an instant. She bit her lips, flung her chin up and smiled into Edith Potter's face—smiled as though this were a triumph.

Edith rushed to the door. Barbara gave a soft cry of mortified protest. But her eyes, never meeting Chickie's, she followed. She went out, as her brother did, without a word.

To her finger tips Chickie was shaking! The blow had fallen on her thought; left it stunned. No one had ever struck her before. And to have this tall, proud woman fling out her hand and dash it in her face. To have Barbara lower her head—and leave!

Chickie touched her face. It felt raw and smarting. She went over to the mirror and looked at the blazing red. At first her eyes filled, but immediately she felt again the instinct to raise her head; felt through her an old thrill of pride.

She stood looking at herself wondering at this sense of elation. She recalled Edith stripping the basket from her arm—and smiled—a little, aching smile, yet proud.

For between Chickie and this shabby violence of Edith Potter's, this weak assent of Barbara's was a barrier and it was more impossible than the wall between sin and their conviction. She said to herself suddenly, "I couldn't do that! I never could!"

She judged them as they had judged her. Now her guilt seemed less—it was less than Edith Potter's. Edith had no right to condemn her; no right to send her from that home like a thing whipped, late at night! Edith had no right to come here and slap Chickie's face!

Thinking this, a calm dropped into her mind. They had no right to do it. They could not hurt her. She would not be hurt! Yet she was alone in this justification of herself. And she knew that she was alone. And in this isolation of the spirit her battle must be fought.

She went walking about the room, picking up letters, putting them back in their places. She said, abruptly: "Suppose he is dead!" The terror of the night became oppressive, like an anguish.

Paused at Window

Yes—suppose he were dead? And this consequence of her deed, even of her existence, he now shoved upon her shoulders? She had come down here to forget; to grit her teeth and work a strong, heroic way back; she had asked nothing; sought no one. All this had followed her. The tragedy would be hers—hers alone.

Even her own thought would call her to answer.

She paused at the window. In the sky there went whirling, luminous, white forms, their draperies touched with fire.

Chickie trembled. Lee Willman might be lying out there—he might be dying. Suddenly his face came before her; suddenly it seemed willful and cruel that he should have left her so; that he should have turned from her with such a hurt and accusation in his look.

Oh—he had not stopped to think of her—had not cared if she were shoved down and down. She had spoiled his dream; had marred the world for him. And his own young hurt was more than he would bear. Yet he had knelt and pressed her hand, saying how gloriously he loved her. He loved her—

Chickie knew that kind of love—love that thinks only of itself; only of its own small dream. That young, imperious love, demanding so hotly. She had suffered once because of it.

Bought Papers

She knew now this was not love—it was but the cry of self—self only. Yet she could understand it; she could be filled with pity for him, suffering it. She would have gone gladly with the dog at her heels and scoured the hills to find him.

She bought all the papers—nights and morning. She spent the day waiting for them. She grew ill with suspense and worry. One afternoon, walking down the street, she came face to face with Rosie Maxwell. Rosie forgot her languid poise. She grabbed Chickie's arm: "Well, where in the world have you been?"

"Here and there!"

"You've quit, have you?"

"Yes"

"Where did you leave Lee?"

"What do you mean?"

Chickie tucked her arm confidently in Chickie's: "Do you mean to say I'm not sure? Why, we had it all sloped out that the two of you had eloped. Rather strange he should disappear and you not show up—"

Chickie's blood raced. She said almost in a gasp: "Have you heard from him? Have they found him?"

A long drawled: "Well—if you're asking me, I believe they know more than they're telling, and so do you. Why, it was even rumored you were to be in the bridal party."

Chickie forced a laugh. "Was it?

She knew now this was not love

But the papers set that straight.)

Not completely. Funny you never said a word to any of us that you were going out for the wedding."

"Well—I wasn't supposed to. You can understand," Chickie was inwardly so fearful of Eloise and the knowledge she might be concealing that she chaffed swiftly and laughing: "You know how it is with these top-knots, don't you?"

Played Trump Card

Eloise now laid down her trump card: "I'll say I do. The sweet Mrs. Potter especially. We heard that Barbara had even ordered a dress for you and that at the last minute Edith wouldn't allow you to stand up with her. Come through, Helena! Was there a wild scene? We heard that Lee was ready to kill his sister and walked out the day after the wedding on account of it."

Chickie could scarcely breathe. She said: "No—that's not true. Barbara wanted me. Myra King, who was to be maid of honor, sent word she couldn't come. So they insisted on me and the dress was there, of course. But at the last minute Myra arrived." The faultlessness of this fiction surprised her. She went on swiftly: "I don't think that had a thing to do with his disappearance. They were always quarreling."

Eloise gave Chickie a long, narrow scrutiny: "Why did you quit? There are several of your books and other things in the desk? Have you really left for good?"

"Why?"

"Well—I didn't find it pleasant, Eloise. I don't wish to be at the back and call of the boss' family just because I happen to be a stenographer. That's about the reason."

"I'll say you have queer ideas, girl. Turn the dago boy over to me. I'll be at his back and call any hour he wishes."

"He may be dead, Eloise."

"Likely not. We have it figured out otherwise. Of course we count you in on it. We figure that he called for a showdown from Mrs. Potter and the old man told them he was going to marry you. They wouldn't come through so he left in a huff. He's hot as fire, you know. He may be drowning his sorrow or he may be punishing them. Why don't you come in and get your things?"

"I will."

"Well—so long—don't grieve too much."

Questions Answered and Suggestions Exchanged

I HAVE had ever so many questions as to what I can serve for refreshments that will be really Chinese at Mah Jongg parties.

As the popularity of this fascinating Chinese game is spreading like wild fire, and we are all eager to learn to "point" and to "chow" at least, many others are wondering how they can serve foods befitting the occasion. When we think of Chinese food we naturally first think of Chop Suey or Chow Mein (the meaning of Chow-Mein is fried noodles).

It is interesting to know that Chop Suey originated in America. It is purely an American product, and until quite recently was unknown in China.

It is essential that tea be served either Formosa or Oolong. Tea is a dessert serve sweetmeats, such as preserved ginger, cherries, plums and cumquats (kumquats) I know are Chinese omanent. Almond cakes are also very popular.

Spaghetti Chop Suey.

One package of spaghetti; cook in boiling salted water. On account of additional cooking of the spaghetti, it is necessary to only parboil the spaghetti for 5 minutes. Two onions (medium size); 1½ cups chopped celery, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons fat or butter substitute, 2 green peppers, 2 cups tomatoes, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ½ pound round steak (chopped).

METHOD—Melt fat in frying pan, cook chopped pepper, chopped onion and celery slowly for 10 minutes. Add tomatoes and seasoning, cook until thick. Cook other ingredients together for 5 minutes. Add drained spaghetti, cook slowly for ½ hour. Fry round steak in small cakes; crumble, serve piping hot.

Chow Mein Delight.

One package egg noodles (wide); cooking in boiling salted water until tender which generally takes about 10 minutes. One small pork, ½ pound veal, ½ cup boiling peas (run celery cut in thin strips). 1 cup sliced onions, ¼ pound mushrooms or a bunch of radishes, 1 hard boiled egg, paprika, 1 to 1½ cups soup stock or canned consomme, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 tablespoon flour.

METHOD—Cut meat in small pieces; brown in hot fat. Add celery, onion, cook slowly until tender. Add boiled ham and mushrooms.

Thicken the gravy with 1 tablespoon flour; season. Place egg noodles in serving dish covered with meat, gravy with hard boiled egg and paprika. Macaroni or spaghetti may be served the same way.

Bon Yun Buen (Almond Cakes)

Two cups flour, ¾ cup sugar, ¼ cup lard, 2 eggs, ½ teaspoon baking powder, almonds.

METHOD—Mix the flour, sugar and lard together well, add shortening and mix until thoroughly blended. Then add the slightly beaten eggs. Roll out to ¼ board and shape into small round cakes about an inch and one-half in diameter. In the center of each place an almond. Bake until nicely browned.

To Stock a Camp

Another question is—What will I need to stock my vacation camp for four weeks. Canned soups would help simplify the Summer menu of cottage food problem—and it must be simplified if the camp mother is to have her share of the rest and recreation.

I'd suggest the following list for a family of four to last four weeks:

One dog. Uneeda Biscuits, 1 doz. pkgs. of cookies, in varieties to suit; 5 lbs. of coffee, 1 lb tea, 1 lb. cocoa, 2 bottles olives, 3 cans chicken, 1 cans lunch tongue, 2 cans pickled lambs tongues, 3 jars of fruit syrups, 12 large cans evaporated milk, 3 jars of frankfurts, 3 cans deviled ham, 6 cans sardines, 1 cake of cheese, 1 cans of your preferred soft drinks such as Moxie, Ginger Ale or Sarsaparilla, 4 cans peas, 4 cans corn, salmon, 2 cans tuna fish, 2 cans mushrooms, 2 cans lobster, 2 cans shrimps, 2 cans peanut butter, 3 cans Spaghetti, 1 carton dozen of jars of bacon, 2 jars dried beef, 4 cans baked beans, 4 cans brown bread, 2 cans ham salad, 2 large jars salad dressing, 1 jar grated cheese, 6 cans assorted soups, 3 cans tomatoes, 2 cans spinach, 2 cans mushrooms, 1 can Italian spaghetti, 3 cans vegetable cooking fat or oil.

Home Hints

In warm weather, keep cheese fresh and sweet by wrapping it in a cloth wrung out of vinegar and water.

* * *

To wash dark cotton materials properly, first remove the dressing by soaking in cold water to which has been added a handful of Epsom salts.

* * *

Eggs can be quickly beaten without a beater by putting into a clean, dry glass, covering with a white paper, and then shaking vigorously. A little sugar added helps the process.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

MARTHA'S face fell. Her look of chagrin astonished me.

"You don't need men, then," she said, almost sadly.

I hesitated and stammered. I wanted to say that I needed a man like Mabel every minute. Then I brought myself to her side of the dance floor and gathered her up in my arms.

Ann Lisle

I had gathered one of the further evidences of my own eyes. When I finished, Mabel sat roaring at the dumb waiter girl and understanding me. Then she rounded across the dock and put her hand over mine.

Must Know Soon

"Every one must know soon," she said. "And when that day comes you'll want to pay off every penny of your indebtedness, but in your own way—the monument."

She turned her face in her hands and began to sob, and at that moment there was a knock at the door. I went over and opened it slightly. On the threshold stood Ralph Lacy—and Burly.

"Is Burly Tompkins out on you or me?" I expostulated between the slats. Mr. Allington's first words had given me.

"Sheet!" he barked, swimming around so the light of his office was at his back and it was hard for me to read the expression on his face. "Like folks who think fast. Knew you would. Good deal good. Want to retain you at the same salary for three years. Contingents here. Want to sign?"

"Just like that!" I gasped.

"Mother's Burly Tompkins's only child. Partner's deserted from old Burly's mother. Burly is his family name. Old Burly's ear full of the client," exclaimed this amazing man, who talked so fast that I could barely follow his terse and untrimmed sentences.

"But I thought Mr. Tompkins said that the reason he broke with brother Ned as well was because he had no children—at least no son of his own."

Disowned Mother

"Disowned my mother when she married my father. He was family coachman," rejoind Mr. Allington defiantly and with a lack of restraint or concealment that didn't impress me as valiant. Instead, it seemed as big and simple as he was beginning to appear. He went on: "Here's where my mother was sixteen. Brought up on farm. Came to city five years ago. Made good. Found half-million down and out. Took him in. Did better. Rented building from old Burly without saying a word about relationship. Never spoke anything but business to him until week ago. Burly sent for me. Told me to give you work or get out of building when lease runs out. Said I needed you. Gave you trial. Made good. Ready to sign?"

With a hand that wanted to tremble, I reached out and took the contract. It was an amazing document. The salary named was astounding.

With this retainer and any real-estate luck in getting other business, I realized that I could pay off Neal's debt in less than half the time I'd been counting on.

"You're just like your grandfather," I managed quietly. It was one of my happiness. "I know you're sane, I know I can take your word and count on it just as I would on your bond. And I realize that you'll hold me to the exact and scrupulous performance of my end of things. You're just like Burly Tompkins. And I can get happily and at my best with any man who's a chip of that good old block."

"Tell him that when you go over to thank him," said my new client so grimly that I might have missed if I hadn't found something heartening in this recitation of the interest of old Burly and his tribe. "Convey good-will to the Chief first of every month. Good day."

Old Face Wrinkled

When I came into Burly Tompkins' office I brushed by the office boy.

The old face wrinkled into a smile, but the owner caught himself in the act and contorted the smile into a scowl as he asked:

"How's that search coming out? Any news from that wonderful young brother of yours? He's got me. That boy's the kind of a son a man would be proud to have."

"There's no—good news from Ned," I stammered, then I went on: "You're a wonderful grandson, Mr. Allington is a remarkable man and remarkably like you. I know I'm going to get one of the squarest deals of my life. I came to thank you for what you've done for Neal Heland's sister—and for him."

"You're putting the off," he cried. "What is it you know about your brother Neal? What is it you're trying to keep from me about that boy?"

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A friend asked me to dance at a society. I was not then aware the girls are paying the men a certain sum. I have since then taken a lady from my company to the dance in preference of the young men and then to the "Man of the Dance." I feel that I am not in the girls' place to pay the man. What do you think?

MISS COLLEGE GIRL.

I AGREE with you. Even though it is a society dance and even though, indeed, it is Leap Year's the young ladies should be content to let their hostesses begin at the dance.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a girl of nineteen and have been going about with a man one year, my senior. He asked to take me to his home to meet his parents. They live in the same town. Is it proper for me to go? If so how long should I stay?

M. L. K.

IT IS a young man with a decided and sure sense of social appropriateness and fairs and amusements. And apparently, too, he is thought up to enjoy sharing his pleasures and the friendliness of his parents with his friends. Indeed it is proper for you to go. If he is to be but a call, stay about an hour or so the first time. When you leave shake hands with the mother, the mistress and tell her how much you appreciated being asked to come and how happy you have been in knowing them and in being with them in their home. Then shake hands with the father and thank him, too.

He was accepted as an authority on modern Irish literature and drama.

TO RADIOCAST COOLIDGE'S PICTURE

(International Newsreel Photo)

RECEIVING END OF TELEPHOTO SYSTEM

If present plans for radiocasting President Coolidge's picture during his speeches is carried out, apparatus like that above will be used for receiving the photograph. It is hoped that present tests being carried on will make it possible to send the picture by air, but if not it will be sent by wire.

HEAR COOLIDGE AND SEE HIM BY RADIO

If tests now being carried on are successful, certain radio audiences who listen to President Coolidge's campaign speeches by radio will be able to see him almost simultaneously.

An attempt may be made to transmit the photograph by radio; but if this fails the telephone line will be used.

The plan has been discussed by Secretary Hoover and the President.

The effectiveness of the President's broadcast speeches would be greatly enhanced if a picture of the President taken while making the address that was being heard could be thrown on the screen.

The system used will be similar to that employed recently when pictures were sent from Cleveland to New York by wire.

The transmission is effected by a needle of light, projected through a lens on a film revolving on a spool. The light and dark is brought out by shading of this line. The final picture is composed of a large number of vertical lines which vary from thin to thick to bring out the light and dark of the picture.

HUGHES TO MEET MANY FRENCH STATESMEN

Paris, July 28 (A.P.)—Secretary of State Hughes will have an opportunity to meet most of the prominent statesmen of France during his stay in Paris. President Doumergue and former Presidents Millerand and Poincare either will receive the American statesman or will meet him at social functions.

Mr. Hughes will be received tonight by Manuel Fourcade, president of the Paris Bar Association.

It will meet M. Poincare Wednesday at a dinner given in his honor by Ambassador Herrick.

WGY BROADCAST ON 15-METER WAVE LENGTH

Schenectady, —July 28.—The General Electric radio broadcasting station in this city, WGY, broadcast its regular program on a wave-length of 15.85 metres, said to be the shortest wave-length ever used by any broadcasting station in this country.

While the program was going out on this short wave it was also broadcast simultaneously on two other wave lengths, believed to be the first time any station has sent the same program out on three distinct wavelengths at the same time.

The fifteen-metre wave-length will continue to be used by WGY to demonstrate the greater advantage of the short waves. Particular attention will be given to the afternoon programs, as it is believed the short waves are more reliable, will improve daylight broadcasting and perhaps make radio signals constant twenty-four hours of the day.

Under ordinary wave-lengths programs are heard at much greater distances at night.

Under the new arrangement all programs from WGY will now be broadcast on 280 meters, either also or 107 metres, and on 15.85 metres simultaneously.

Radio Queries

1—Is a hookup similar to your 100-meter one, but using two tubes in place of, necessarily audio stacker for the 1-kilometer British wave-length? Would a post will, using condenser be necessary? 2—Have and Sesquibox, and WEAF, using 1,000 watts, to get more KDKA's current wave. Had WEAR, WHZ and WGN on channels not couldn't clear them on. T. P. B.

1—Better not try to use a crystal receiver, as it would have to be hookup sensitive. Use Sesquibox coils, the size of which for various wavelengths is given in the manufacturer's catalog. About 100 turns. 2—At least 1000 and other would be better. 3—The American test sets seemed to bring in KDKA better than WGY. You may have a little to swing on secondary. Some harmonics are better than others.

Is there any such station as WWAP in Pittsburgh on a wave length of 359 or 360 meters? M. S.

WAAP is in Chicago, 226 metres. There is no station in Pittsburgh as about this wave.

I have built a crystal set and cannot get WGI without getting WNAC. You probably have a poor hookup. Send it along and we may be able to help.

On the Air Last Night

By THE LISTENER

The clarity and volume with which radio programs have been coming through of late is amazing. About the only reason for this is the approach of cooler weather. This chilly snap during Friday and Saturday certainly showed up in radio reception during those two evenings. Saturday night I listened to two Chicago stations, and WHAM, the short wave station in Rochester, N. Y.—all on the loud speaker. A friend of mine reported hearing WOS, Jefferson City, Mo., one evening last week while another is beginning to get the Cuban stations.

At 7:45 last night a well-known Braintree amateur opened up his powerful transmitter and tested for over a minute, interfering with both the church services from WNAC and WTMH. This gentleman knows the Federal regulation covering transmission by amateur stations during church services. And if, by chance, he happens to read this paragraph, he will take notice that I am going to publish his name on the next offence, so that the radio audience in Braintree and vicinity will know who it is.

Both the local church services were full of interest. From Tremont Temple, I heard a brass band play several hymns. It sounded like an old-fashioned revival meeting. The preacher from the Temple was also the fortunate possessor of an excellent radio voice.

Of late I have been using a different circuit for reception. After several months of a single circuit outfit, I felt the need for a change. Fully realizing the sharp tuning made possible through the use of the primary and secondary method, I adopted a scheme which enabled me to use the old single circuit layout, and still enjoy the advantages of the tuned secondary. The results are well worth the effort, and the results in a set that will not radiate and bother your neighbors. I will surely submit specifications to the radio editor, so that he can publish a diagram for you to change over your own single circuit.

The Capital Theatre program came through clear as a bell. They had a pianist on the program who would be hard to beat. His name sounded like Saverton, but I couldn't say this was correct. You know how hard it is sometimes to catch unfamiliar names over the radio. Anyway Roxie said the gentleman was a son-in-law of Leopold Godowski, the famous concert pianist, and was also Josef Hofman's assistant. He played two numbers, one an etude in A flat, and the other Liebestraume by Liszt. His technique was perfect, and the piano he used produced a faultless tone.

Another fitting contribution to the evening's entertainment was the excellent program given by WMAF, from the Mark Strand Theatre in New York City. While I didn't get WMAF as loud as I did WJAR, it was enjoyable nevertheless. WMAF will doubtless be louder as the season progresses.

At 8:45 some code popped in, which interfered somewhat. It was the WROA, American Steamship Westpool, off quarantine in Boston Harbor, who called NAD, the Charlestown Navy Yard, and WHF, the Board of Trade Building station. WHF answered the Westpool and told him he had no traffic for him. WROA was using his 460 metre wave, but he was so close to the city that it was bound to overlap somewhat on the broadcast bands.

'HUB'S' SWEETHEART IN DILEMMA

ELIZABETH HINES

Leading lady of "Marjorie," now playing at the Shubert Theatre, will probably appear on the stage tonight and continue her love duets with Roy Royston, despite the fact that both resigned from the company as result of a salary dispute.

QUITS, BUT WILL KEEP ON WITH LOVE DUETS

Elizabeth Hines and her sweetheart, Roy Royston, will probably continue to sing their love duets together in "Marjorie" at the Shubert Theatre, despite the fact that both have quit their jobs.

While "Boston's sweetheart," as Miss Hines was billed, and Royston, the dashing young Englishman, have notified the management of the show that they are all through with the piece, yet under the Equity agreement they must remain with the company for two weeks.

The Equity rules will not permit any member of the organization to "jump" a show and consequently both Miss Hines and Royston are more than likely to be back in Boston before the curtain goes up at the Shubert tonight.

The pair spent the week-end in New York, where they went Saturday night after serving notice on Nat Hoth, the company manager, that they wanted to sever connection with "Majorie."

It was money that brought about the reduction in th "Majorie company.

Royston wanted $750 a week salary and Manager Roth laughed at him. Having delivered his ultimatum, there was nothing left for Royston to do but tender his resignation when the increase was refused him.

Whereupon Miss Hines stepped forward and announced that she, too, was through if Royston left the company.

MYSTERY MAN IS 'LIFER'

Sent to Bridgewater Hospital; Has Looked at the World Through Tiny Window

"Old Bill" Barrett, famous mystery man of State Prison and a "lifer," is going to Bridgewater for a change.

For thirty years "Old Bill," who shot and killed a constable in the town of Lincoln in 1894, and who was convicted and sentenced to a life behind the bars, has visualized the frame of the tiny window of cell "7 South" in the great stone prison.

Here, standing on tiptoe "Old Bill" has witnessed the passing of Boston & Maine trains. For hours at a time, especially at night, Bill would stand and gaze wistfully at the twinkling lights of the trains, the signal lights, the blaze of red fire, open locomotive doors, the headlights of outgoing passenger trains—the headlights of those arriving at the great North terminal.

IN NARROW CELL.

This has been life to Bill for thirty years.

Cell "7 South" is probably the narrowest in the State prison, but "Old Bill" wouldn't exchange it for the best-equipped "trusty's" cell in the institution.

Now he's going out—going out to Bridgewater, where there are great open spaces, farmlands, gardens, the open sky, spacious cells and, above all—the railroad which spells life to "Old Bill."

But "Old Bill's" not sure he'll like it more than "7S South."

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is tempering justice with mercy in the case of "Old Bill" Barrett and Edward Carter, another "lifer," who's been "in stir" for more than 20 years for the killing of an Everett police officer in 1902.

Dr. McLaughlin, prison physician, has recommended that both old timers be transferred to the Bridgewater State Hospital.

DEFIES ALL CUSTOMS.

Barrett, in particular, is in need of hospital treatment. Recently he suffered an attack of cerebral hemorrhage and his life was despaired of. But "Old Bill" came back and now he's going out to see a bit more of life.

William Barrett has defied all known customs while incarcerated at Charlestown.

He has never had a visitor. Protesting his innocence at all times, he has refused offers of a pardon from five Massachusetts Governors.

He has subsisted exclusively on the course prison fare. On holidays and other special occasions when other inmates were glad to partake of turkey and roast pork dinners, ice cream and the like "Old Bill" has stuck to prison food.

HISTORY A MYSTERY.

Barrett if eighty-three years of age. He is well educated and refined. He has been called "The Mystery Lifer" because he never revealed the identities of his relatives or spoke of his early life.

It is said Barrett has a wife and daughter living. Bill has never spoken of them. He has never written a letter during his thirty years imprisonment. He has been a model prisoner.

FLIER, WIFE AND BABY KILLED IN NEW PLANE

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—Osmund Belcher's new type of passenger carrying aircraft crashed to earth on its first flight and killed Belcher, his wife, their 8-year-old son, and Burgess Creeth, the pilot. It was a cabin monoplane, luxuriously outfitted, built mostly of wood, cardboard and wood.

The plane took off nicely but, after reaching an altitude of 500 feet, suddenly fell.

COOLIDGE AND MOSES TO CONFER ABOUT CONGRESS

Washington, July 28.—Conferences on the political situation as it relates to Republican senatorial candidates will be held this week by President Coolidge with Senator Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, and others. Plans of Chairman Butler and the Republican National Committee provide for the waging of a hard fight for election of a Republican Congress.

LA FOLLETTE'S RUNNING MATE AND FAMILY ON CAPE COD VACATION

Left to right are Edward, 10 years old; Elizabeth, 13; Mrs. Wheeler; Dick, 5; Senator Wheeler; Francis 7, and John 15. They were photographed on the beach at South Wellfleet, where the Montana Senator, Vice-Presidential candidate on the Progressive ticket, was the guest of Attorney General Daugherty. Wheeler will campaign in the States west of the Mississippi and declared they would support Senator La Follette and Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts for re-election.

Wheeler Backs Walsh to Win in Bay State

South Wellfleet, July 28.—"Without a third party, millions of voters, including Senator La Follette and myself, would have been disfranchised."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Vice-Presidential candidate on the Progressive ticket, was the speaker.

With Mrs. Wheeler and their five children, the Senator has come back to his native State for a few weeks' rest prior to opening his campaign in Boston the latter part of August.

Caught in his bathing suit on the end of Nauset Light Beach, adjacent to the cottage he has taken, Mr. Wheeler talked about the campaign.

HONESTY THE KEYNOTE.

"Honesty in government," he declared, "will be the keynote. The people cannot expect the corrupt conditions in Washington to be cleaned up by either Mr. Coolidge or Mr. Davis. Both are backed by the same interests."

"The man who attracted national interest as head of the committee that drove Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty from office, declared he had received letters from Democrats all over the country saying they "cannot stand for Davis and Bryan."

"There is but room for one standpat party in this country," he continued. "The Democrats should have nominated a liberal. When they failed to do this there was no place for Senator La Follette or many of the great mass of liberal people to go.

ACCUSES BOTH PARTIES.

"I couldn't conscientiously advise people to vote for Davis because there is no difference between him and Coolidge, insofar as their affiliations are concerned."

Wheeler charged that the Republican administration in Washington is "reeking with rottenness" and that the Democrats are largely concerned in "violations of the Sherman anti-trust laws."

He confidently predicted the ticket represented by La Follette and himself would carry the States west of the Mississippi.

Asked regarding chances of success in Massachusetts, he stated that reports had reached him tending to show the Democrats would run a bad third here.

PRAISE FOR WALSHES.

Wheeler highly praised both Senator David I. Walsh and his own Democratic colleague from Montana, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, both of whom he characterizes as "progressive, high-minded public servants."

The probability of a presidential deadlock between the three parties in the electoral college was also admitted by the Senator.

If this should happen, it was pointed out, and the House of Representatives be unable to choose a President, the Senate would be called upon to elect one from the two candidates receiving the highest votes for Vice-President.

Should this take place and Wheeler be chosen, Massachusetts would be represented in the White House by a native son for the first time since the days of Adams.

Few men in public life have a more interesting life story than Senator Wheeler.

BORN IN HUDSON.

He was born in Hudson, February 27, 1882, youngest of eight children. His father was a farmer and village shoemaker.

The boy financed his way through a business training school and worked as a stenographer, saving his money to go West. He worked for the Draper Corporation at Hopedale and the American Optical Company at Southbridge.

He went to Ann Arbor, Mich., and entered the University of Michigan Law School. In vacation he worked as a book agent and met Miss Lulu White, the girl he was to wed. After graduating, he started for the Pacific Coast and stopped off at Butte, Mont.

FIRST PUBLIC OFFICE.

There he practiced law and was elected to the State Legislature. In 1913 he was appointed Federal district attorney and in 1920 was nominated for the Governorship with the endorsement of the Non Partisan League, but was defeated.

Backed by the same organization, he was elected to the United States Senatorship in 1922. During the Daugherty investigation, he was indicted in Montana charged with accepting a fee for aiding a client to get oil land permits from the government.

After an investigation by his Senatorial colleagues, he was found innocent of the charge.

NEW YORK LABOR TO ENDORSE LA FOLLETTE

New York, July 28.—Jerome T. De Hunt, chairman of the American Labor Party, issued a call today for a convention of local members on August 11 to indorse the nomination of Senator La Follette and Senator Wheeler for President and Vice-President and to nominate candidates for Congress and the State Legislature.

DAVIS TOLD TO START FIGHT IN N. E. STATES

Dark Harbor, Islesboro, Me., July 28.—Democratic leaders in New England desire John W. Davis to open his campaign in this section of the country. They believe there is great prospect of swinging several New England States into the Democratic column and that Mr. Davis' early appearance in this field will have a very good effect, especially in Maine, where the State election is to be held in September.

Presentation of this phase of the situation was one of the purposes of the visit paid to Mr. Davis by Daniel J. N. McGillicuddy, national committeeman from Maine.

Their conference was arranged for at the home of Frank L. Polk, one of Mr. Davis' confidential advisers.

SIX HEADQUARTERS FOR LA FOLLETTE CAMPAIGN

Washington, July 28.—Establishment of six regional campaign headquarters is planned by managers of the La Follette-for-President campaign. Headquarters in New York city will be under direction of Gilbert E. Roe, former law partner of Senator La Follette, with Jurisdiction over New England and Eastern States. Headquarters for Southern States probably will be in Washington.

U. S. FLIERS READY FOR OCEAN HOP

Globe-Girdlers Expected to Start Final Jump Wednesday From Kirkwall

Brough, England, July 28.—The United States round-the-world fliers, under command of Lieutenant H. Smith, made their final arrangements today for their trans-Atlantic hop.

The airmen, up to noon, had not received word from Admiral Magruder U. S. N., that the convoy and safety ships were all in their appointed stations. The aviators are under orders not to start until Admiral Magruder sends this information.

It is hoped that the admiral will have notified the fliers that the vessels are all in place by Wednesday. If the weather is favorable the aviators expect to start for Kirkwall at dawn Wednesday.

TWO FIREMEN HURT AT $75,000 MAINE FIRE

Lewiston, Me., July 28.—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed one of the landmarks of the city, the Baker block at Main and Bates street, causing damage estimated at $75,000. Firemen battled nearly two hours to save nearby wooden buildings.

James Kearns, a fireman, was hurled under a blazing cornice and a heavy switchhook, falling with a crash from a height of 40 feet. Another fireman, Charles Whitehouse, rushed to Kearns' aid and dragged him out. Kearns' back and several ribs were badly injured.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS AND BRIDE REMARRY

San Francisco, July 28.—Gouverneur Morris, famous American novelist, married his second wife for the second time in Salinas, near Monterey, Cal., today, to comply with the California divorce laws. Morris and Miss Ruth Wightman, his secretary, were married outside this State several months ago. A final decree of divorce from his first wife, Mrs. Elsie Morris, owner of a New York beauty parlor, has just been granted the writer in Los Angeles.

ARMY MAY TRAIN BETTER MEN FOR DISTANCE RUNS

NEW PLAN TO PUT U.S. AT TOP

By STEWART JACKSON.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—A faint glimmer of hope appears on the horizon of American track athletes as efforts middle and long-distance running, and a plan has been evolved which may bring the Stars and Stripes back to the forefront of supremacy in these events, in which they have been hopelessly dragged in the dust for years.

The United States has not won a Marathon race since 1908, and then Johnny Hayes, who was declared winner in London, actually finished third. We won with Hicks at St. Louis in 1904, and this was our only clean-cut long-distance victory.

In the games just finished at Paris the American team fell down utterly and completely in the long grinds and did not win a single one of these events, a showing which has startled track and field critics and coaches throughout the country and has demonstrated beyond all measure of a doubt that there is something wrong with our methods of long-distance training in this country, and that some drastic measures must be taken during the next four years.

Here's the proof's proof:

10,000-meter run—Won by Ritola, Finland.

800-metre run—Won by Lowe, Great Britain.

3,000-meter steeplechase—Won by Ritola, Finland.

1,500-Meter run—Won by Nurmi, Finland.

Cross-country run—Won by Nurmi, Finland.

3,000-meter team race—Won by Finland.

10,000-meter walk—Won by Frigerio, Italy.

Marathon race—Won by Stenroos, Finland.

This is the most telling American has ever taken in any branch of major sports, and the fact that we won the games at Paris is due alone to our surviving qualities, aided by good hurdlers and experts in the field events. But the victories are what brought home the bacon, and if some other nation can develop a sprinter of ten of the type of Harold Abrahams of England for the next Olympic games, the Stars and Stripes may not float on the pole in 1928.

This brings us to the remedy, if such it be. During the last week critics and coaches have decreed that America has been developing its track athletics too extensively from colleges and prep schools, and that as a result the fact that youths of the collegiate age have not the heart for the mad killing grind of the long distance they had, such work during the high school and college years would injure them later.

Neither have college students the time; also, long-distance running is not up to the mark from an scholarship standpoint demanded by the varsity lads and their followers.

The Army, however, is able to develop three long-distance men, and a move was launched this week, headed by Dwight F. Davis, Acting Secretary of War, and one of the Davis tennis cup and general all-round sports enthusiast, to inaugurate cross-country running in the service and during the next four years to develop it to such a stage that the services may be able to add to the roster of American track athletes and send distance men to the next Olympic games who have some chance of winning.

Georges Will Return to Gay Paree with $110,000

WHEN Georges Carpentier was flattened by Jack Dempsey they said he was through.

When he was k. o'd by Battling Siki they said the same thing, and repeated it with emphasis when the Frenchman lost to Tom Gibbons.

However, Gorgeous Georges since his return here less than two months ago has earned $90,000—$45,000 for each fight with Gibbons and Tunney. He is to get $20,000 more for mixing with Jimmy Slattery at Buffalo as soon as he closes some minor details with Promoter Charley Murray.

Wouldn't you like to be all through—like Carpentier?

Brockton Golfer Set New Record for Endurance

Brockton, July 28.—Just for the fun of it and without advertising his stunt beforehand, F. Ashton Parmenter, of the Brockton County Club, today went after the Marathon golf record. He played exactly 12 hours and went around the nine-hole course 14 times.

The distance around the nine holes is 5894 yards. The total length of Parmenter's travels, measured from one tee to the next, was 46.8 miles. Counting the steps he took on the green he probably walked close to 50 miles.

Parmenter, who is a prominent member of the club and has a handicap of 11, shot some pretty good golf, too, considering the amount of work he did. For the 126 holes which he played he took just 579 strokes, an average of a little better than 83 for each 18 holes.

Parmenter, who is about 25 years old, has been playing golf only about three years. He started in his trip about 8:30 in the morning. Part of the time he played alone and sometimes he had company. According to the testimony of eye witnesses, he finished as fresh as an east wind.

CONCORD TIGERS EVEN HOME TOWN SERIES

The Concord Tigers evened up the series with their bitter rival, the St. Bridget's baseball club of Lexington, 14 to 5. St. Bridget's took the first contest at Concord last Tuesday, 9 to 8. Leonard Smith pitched a great game for the Tigers, allowing but six hits and fanning 10 batsmen.

MARKLE IS BACK WITH AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

St. Paul, July 28.—Clifford Markle, who deserted the Yankees because he could not make the grade, is back again with the American Association. Miller Huggins drafted Markle, who formerly pitched for the Yankees and who was going great in the American Association League, but could not keep up his stride in the majors.

FRENCH WOMEN PROMINENT AS HORSE OWNERS

By ALICE LANGELIER

Paris, July 28.—"Love me, love my horse," is becoming the slogan of the pretty Parisien. The French turf is fast growing popular with the women.

Before the war only two of the fair sex were registered as owners of thoroughbreds, one of them the famous Madame Edmond Blanc, who spent her time superintending the breeding of horses. Today there are as many as twenty women in the racing field, and nearly all have won important successes. Among them is Madame Edmond Blanc, who took up the work of her husband upon his death and, in 1921, won the big French Derby with her filly Mon Noar and later several other important races.

Madame Gallier was the first woman granted the opportunity to train her own horses while awaiting the selection of a trainer. This was a big step in the way of the women. But Fanny Heldy, of the Grand Opera, went a step farther when she asked a riding license. This was too much for the men, and they refused; so the pretty singer was obliged to content herself with riding her horses at exercise and winning a neat pile of money.

PHILADELPHIA TO HAVE TWO-DAY RACING MEET

Philadelphia, July 28.—Followers of the bang tails will have two days of entertainment at Belmont mile track next month. The West Philadelphia Square Club has closed a contract for the lease of the track for Wednesday and Thursday, August 13 and 14. A program of five races will be run each afternoon for $1,000 purses, and the best runners in this and surrounding sections of the country will be seen in action. W. E. Haller will have charge of the racing.

PEPPER MARTIN TO BOX KID SULLIVAN

Kid Sullivan, junior lightweight champion, will defend his title in a 15-round contest with Vincent "Pepper" Martin at the Lexington Stadium on August 15. Sullivan won Johnny Leonard in a fifteen round battle at the Lexington Stadium and Martin has already spent his share of honors in the semi-final bout of 10 rounds.

Sullivan and Martin have already met twice, honors being evenly divided. Each of these previous battles was marked by numerous knockdowns scored by both lads.

DICK HOBLITZELL LANDS NEW BERTH

Reading, Pa., July 28.—Dick Hoblitzell, Reading International League baseman, has left Reading to become manager of the Bridgeport (Ct.) Eastern League team. He had not played with Reading since June 23, when he was hurt in a game with Syracuse. He led the Reading hitters at that time with an average of .330.

Famous Negro Boxer Passes to Great Beyond

Utica, N. Y., July 28.—Amos Lavender, 64, better known to the sporting world of 20 years ago as "Thunderbolt Smith," one of the foremost negro boxers of his day, died here today after two months illness.

At 19 he began a boxing career in which he fought 223 battles, many of them with his bare knuckles and toured America and Europe as the protege of William Muldoon. For many years he held the championship title among the colored fighters, scoring knockout after knockout. In 1903, in Manchester, England, he met Jim Smith, British champion, and knocked him out.

His last big battle was with Jack Johnson, at Minneapolis, in 1908. Many years later, in describing that fight, he said:

"He beat me up and made me like it."

Radio Used at Race Track for First Time

For the first time since horse racing became one of the leading sports track enthusiasts will be able to follow the progress of the horses, even though they are miles removed from the track, during the forthcoming international races at Belmont Park and Aqueduct on September 4 and 27 through the cooperation of Major August Belmont and the Winchester Racing Association. Station WJZ of the Radio Corporation of America will broadcast running descriptions of both races direct from the Belmont and Aqueduct tracks.

BERT GALLIA MANAGES RACINE BASEBALL CLUB

Racine, Wis., July 28.—Bert Gallia, Boston pitcher who was released by Manager Huggins, has been named manager of the Racine club of the Minnesota-Dakota league, which succeeds Dan Griffith, who resigned because of ill health.

The appointment was made by President James Allen following an all night session with the Racine backers in order Griffith asked that the burden of manager be lifted from him. Gallia, a product of the baseball factory which turned out Walter Johnson, Germany Schaefer, Jimmy Austin and a host of other stars, will manage, play first base and do the pitching of Turk Elder, former Boston catcher.

AUTO RACES SCHEDULED AT BRIDGETON, N. J., AUG. 2

The exhibition of racing autos at the Garden State Park Grounds, Bridgeton, N. J., Saturday, August 2, will be the biggest event in sport annals held in that section for many years. Speedy drivers will be seen in cars specially constructed for the occasion, and will race over that notch famous exclusively on this well known track.

The Australian champions triumphed this time in straight sets, 9—7, 6—2, 6—4.

William M. Johnston of California defeated Walter Weskcott of the same State in an exhibition match, 10—8, 6—1.

The Vermont State Tennis Association was organized today and it was decided to have a championship tournament at Middlebury beginning August 29. Fred H. Orris of Brattleboro, last winner of the title which has not been in competition for several years was elected temporary president.

INTERNATIONAL BOXING BILL CUDDY'S PLAN

Paris, July 28.—Plans are under way to establish an international boxing organization and to bring it North and South America, it was announced this week by William H. Cuddy of Boston, manager of the American Olympic boxing team.

Representatives of countries of both continents, Mr. Cuddy said, were in conference during the Olympic games and it was likely the outgrowth of the movement would be the staging annually of amateur championship bouts.

Albany Releases Rodgers

Albany, N. Y., July 28.—Announcement was made today that William Rodgers had been released as manager of the Albany Eastern League Club. He will be succeeded tomorrow by William McCorry, who managed the local club in 1920, the first year Albany entered the league.

MISS BROWN TO GO AFTER TWO SPORT TITLES

By FRED J. WALKER.

San Francisco, July 28.—Mary K. Browne, whose name not so long ago signified supremacy in tennis until Molla Mallory appeared on the scene, is to make a determined bid next month in New York and Rhode Island for the national championship in two separate branches of sport—golf and tennis.

The California girl, admittedly one of the strongest golfers in the country today, has been diligently practicing on courts and links for the last half year in an effort to reach a condition where she can hope to compete with such stars as Helen Wills on the courts and Miss Edith Cummings on the links.

Should her venture prove a success—and many Californians who have known her during her long and brilliant athletic history are inclined to believe it may well be—Miss Browne will have set a record feat, if any, have ever equaled in the ranks of sport.

As national tennis champion, Miss Browne was regarded as one of the most brilliant racquet wielders the game had known; and only by Mc-Loughlin-like attack was Molla Mallory able to wrest the title from her.

Of recent years Miss Browne has been going in more and more for golf, apparently relegating her old-time love, tennis, to a minor position among the sports she has engaged in.

But now it is different. When here recently she told of how she was practicing many times a week to again regain her one-time smashing attack on the courts.

And those who saw her game during the Pebble Beach women's golf championships last February were unanimous in declaring she would be a strong contender for the crown now held by Miss Cummings when national women's championship on the links of the Rhode Island Country Club commences next September 1.

The tennis championships commence at Forest Hills, L. I., on next August 11.

DEATH TRAPS AT SAVIN HILL BEACH ARE EXPOSED

Savin Hill swimming beach in Dorchester has many danger spots for children and grown ups.

Boys use as a swimming pool, at high tide, a well formed by a horse shoe curve in the concrete seawall. At low tide, the bottom of this well is an unsightly mass of rubbish, and at high tide the surface of the water is slimy and spotted with floating debris.

In the centre line of this well are three huge stone pillars, part of an unfinished beach-betterment project. On the outer rim of the curve is a heap of gigantic stones, into the midst of which boys of all ages dive and frolic, not realizing their danger.

COSTLY PROJECTS.

The City of Boston has spent thousands of dollars on Savin Hill Beach basin, and swimmers are forbidden to use any part of the beach except the basin, but as long as they can outwit the authorities, the boys continue to swim in spots which are dangerous and which the city does not undertake to guard with life savers.

The pseudo swimming pool, adopted by the kiddies as their favorite swimming hole, can at least be cleaned up, in a few hours' work, and made sanitary for swimming. The stones outside the wall can be removed.

Police or other watchmen should prevent swimmers from crossing the channel to the wharves and piling beyond, where young boys frolic often unclothed, following older boys and not sensing that the feat of crossing the broad cove and playing on the wharves is more dangerous for them than for grownups.

WATER POLLUTED.

Another unsanitary condition at Savin Hill Beach is the drain pipe outlet, around which at low tide children flock to play, and which at high tides to some degree pollutes the waters of the bathing beach into which it directly opens.

The seawall at this beach has not been continued across to the railroad embankment, and the old bulkhead is washed away, so that when the tides rise the sea waters from the bay wash in back of the bathing beach and carry back again into the sea, and around on to the beach, refuse from the neglected dump where filling-in has been commenced and abandoned.

In order to make the beach both sanitary and sightly, the filling-in should be continued, a bulkhead built, shutting off the water, and the appearance of a dumping ground ended for good.

The drinking-fountain menace, already pointed out in the American, has been remedied by the installation of taller spouts, so that patrons of the beach need no longer dip their lips in overflow water in the basins of the fountains.

ONE IMPROVEMENT

This improvement is one of many which has resulted from the campaign for health and safety at the Boston bathing places that the American has undertaken. Among other results are the appointment of nine new City of Boston lifeguards and the ordering by Mayor Curley of many danger markers for the channel off Carson Beach, South Boston. Besides, at the some time that the American published a story pointing out the lack of grappling irons, the City began arrangements to remedy this lack.

The American is on its home stretch now in its campaign to provide volunteer lifeguards to augment the City force at the beaches. This week opens a drive for a few additional members to help protect the South Boston and Dorchester beaches for which several guards have already been procured, trained and made ready for work at an early date. Out-of-town beaches, some of them now absolutely unprotected by guards, will be taken care of.

Every afternoon this week, from two until five o'clock, Captain Wallace and other Red Cross instructors will train volunteers at the Headhouse, City Point.

ENDANGER LIFE AND HEALTH

DEBRIS FROM DUMP SWEPT ONTO BEACH

Dumping ground where a filling-in project was commenced and abandoned. As a result, the tide water still sweeps up around the sea-wall to the bathhouse, shown in the background, and as it flows out picks up debris from the unsightly and unsanitary dump, carrying it into the bay where it often is later cast upon the bathing beach.

DRAIN PIPE MENACE

Nine Additional Lifeguards Appointed

Since the American began its campaign for safer beaches, the City of Boston has appointed nine additional lifeguards.

Mayor Curley has ordered more channel danger buoys for Carson Beach.

The city has taken steps to provide grappling irons for all bathhouses.

Sanitary drinking fountains, to replace unsanitary ones, have been installed at Savin Hill Beach.

3 MINUTE JOURNEYS

By Temple Manning

WITH few exceptions, Norway is the wettest country in the world. Take its record for the month of July, for instance. Assuming a population of less than two million, two hundred thousand people, and weighing only an ordinary raindrop, it would require more than seven billion, two hundred thousand tons of water to equal the rainfall in Norway for the month just passed.

The workers of this unassuming and of course liquid, and ice covered mountainous land were amazed. Mr. Temple of the Boston Journey Co. had the idea of 10 Boston people who were back east nearly two years ago, and who had never been in Scandinavian countries, should be the only people to appreciate the beauties of Norway.

When a girl gets a little plump she attempts to make artificial curves by wearing a corset. Norwegians are not interested in artificial curves and are eligible to land any effective curves because of good, healthful exercise and plenty of food.

There is great economy and beauty in Norwegian dress. Every household when a marriage takes place. To people in this country it is extremely queer to see fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, and in some cases cousins and uncles, all dressed alike. Even the same styles as women in America are not eligible to land any effective curves because of good, healthful exercise and plenty of food.

Each village or town in Norway has a different mode of dress for its women. The different costumes are and pictures of these costumes enable one to tell from what district the wearer comes.

In the larger cities of Norway weddings are celebrated in the same way as in America. But in the more remote parts of the country one may still see a real Norwegian wedding.

The bride is arrayed in her best wedding finery and wearing the dress of her particular district, goes to church in a procession, master of ceremonies behind the bride, while a double string quartet of bridal attendants and bridesmaids follow. Each member of her relatives was sure to ride with her.

It is needless to need nothing unusual for a wedding celebration to last for two or three days at a time. Dancing is the principal feature followed by a dance on the green.

After marriage the woman wears a white starched linen cap, called a "sakum," to distinguish her from the unmarried women who wear no caps.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. F. X. Mahoney, Boston Health Commissioner

DO you know that not only your face and hands, but every part of your body needs light?

It has been said that the sun is the greatest agent in the disinfecting industry. Every ray of light is supposed to contain action of the rays of the sun to the surface of the body. Together with the fresh air Doctor Mahoney outdoor atmosphere, is one of the best aids in the treatment of tuberculosis and every other disease of low nutrition. Well people to keep well and to keep their nutrition to the highest point, are going about their rooms in pumps and sandals or in even more diminutive or Eveready attire for hours at a time.

The exercise is all the more effective if it is carried on by exposure of air without the interposition of glass. This principle underlying this fact is the same principle that makes lounging on the beach at the seashore for long periods of great recreative value.

It is to be remembered, however, that light applied to the entire surface of the body is really such a wonderful agent that especially in disease it ought never to be used without the advice of a physician.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

I suffer greatly from flat foot. What would you suggest for it?

MIL. N. H., Boston.

The name of flat foot is a weakness of the muscles which should hold the foot straight, causing the ankle to drop inward and the bone to come too near to the ground. Yes, arch supports are orthopedist, who will probably recommend exercises and proper shoes.

What is anaemia and can it be cured?

M. A. I., Dorchester.

Anaemia means a lack of red corpuscles in the blood. The first thing to do is to determine the cause for the anaemic condition and I would advise you to have a thorough physical examination by a competent physician who will be able to tell you exactly what you will have to do to overcome this condition.

I have been losing flesh and appetite. I get a sudden roaring in ears and then fall to floor semi-unconscious and remain in that condition for four hours. Have no pains or aches at time. Kindly advise me what hospital I can go to for treatment.

MRS. F. C., Wellesley.

I should suggest that you go to the Massachusetts General Hospital, Fruit street, Boston, and have a thorough physical examination, and be guided by their advice.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

FARM hands are so scarce in the country that the average farmer is now milking his cows by electricity. All that a farmer has to do is to take a cow into the barn, show her where the button is and she does the rest.

THEN after the cow is all milked, she turns the switch off and walks back into the pasture.

THE only thing the farmer has to do is to furnish the barn and pay the electric light bill.

HE went away once for six weeks and they didn't even know he was gone.

BUT he used to call up long distances every night just so that they could hear his voice over the telephone.

HE was so tight, however, that when he called up he reversed the charges.

AND the cow who answered the phone had to give twice as much milk the next day to pay for the call.

BUT the cows finally got wise.

Now when the bell rings they make believe they don't hear it.

ELECTRICITY on the farm is a wonderful thing, but the cows have to wear rubber boots to keep from getting shocked.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

The "eyes" have it.

The largest independent steel company in the country passed the dividend after having made regular payments for eight years, and several less important dividends were dropped; the railroads reported a smaller volume of traffic—dear cotton is retarding the textile industry and trade; still merchants are still experiencing rather quiet demand; published figures recorded a recent increase in unemployed; the crucial conference in London has run into difficulties in its effort to have the Dawes Plan adopted; and wheat suffered a sharp setback one day.

* * *

But these developments were more than offset by a rapid series of bullish happenings. Indeed, the week brought a succession of "new high records."

* * *

Wheat reached new maximum prices for all deliveries. So did corn. So did oats. All these grains are now much higher than they were a year ago, while both wheat and corn have advanced some 30 cents a bushel from this season's low level.

* * *

Cotton also maintained its recent notable strength. The July option crossed 35 cents in New York and futures are quoted from 27 to 28 cents. Unless weather conditions greatly improve, scarcity is inevitable, so that there is no telling how quotations may fluctuate within the next two months.

* * *

The stock of gold held by the reserve banks reached $3,180,000,000, the largest ever recovered by the banks of this or any other country. Pressure to find uses for the increasing superabundance of funds told upon rates. Many millions of dollars are being put out from day-to-day in New York at less than 2 per cent., while sixty-day loans were made last week at 2½ per cent., the lowest record since the war began.

* * *

Sterling exchange reached $4.41⅞, the highest point touched this year, and a gain of 10 cents since the beginning of this month.

* * *

The increases in commodity price advances over declines were more marked last week than in the previous week, when the ratio was 3 to 1.

While the upward movement was, of course, most pronounced in agricultural products, notably grains and hogs, certain other basic commodities also showed improvement.

Copper was quoted as high as 13 cents. Brass products were marked up. Lead advanced. So did tin. Steel held its own. Silver at New York went to 65¾ cents, the year's top quotation.

The outbreak of Civil War in Brazil's principal coffee-growing State, São Paulo, sent coffee higher.

* * *

Politics were relegated to the background by the animated activities in industry and finance.

* * *

Sentiment was more cheerful and confident than at any previous time since 1924 began.

* * *

The security markets did not fail to reflect the favorable developments and the rise in optimism.

The average quotations for fifty representative railroad and industrial stocks not only broke into new ground for the current year, but eclipsed last year's peaks, reached in March, and came within a fraction of the maximum point touched in 1922. Stocks are now 20 points above their 1921 peak, less than two points from the 1919 top, and slightly above 1918's best quotations.

Railroad issues attracted even more attention than industrials. Several low-priced rails were in vigorously marked up, and before the week ended the shares of coal-carrying roads received special attention. The prevailing view in and out of Wall street is to quote the words used by President Willard of the B. & O. in a talk with the writer: "Ten billion dollars added to the value of crops will mean freer purchasing by farmers and, consequently, increased business for the railroads."

* * *

Bonds likewise bettered their previous quotations for the current year. If the usual course be followed, the rise in Government and other gilt-edged bonds, which has been quite pronounced, will be followed by strength in obligations yielding somewhat higher returns and, later, by a rise in more or less speculative issues, certainly the present position of money suggests such developments.

* * *

Unquestionably the public is coming into the security markets. The New York Stock Exchange has had nine successive million-share days, while the curb last week had its busiest day of the year.

OILS ARE SOLD AFTER SETTING OF NEW HIGHS

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange, heavy selling of the oil shares followed the announcement of another cut in Mid-Continent crude by the Prairie and Sinclair companies, encouraged profit-taking in other sections of the list and gave the market an irregular appearance around the noon hour.

In the early burst of bullish enthusiasm, however, another flock of new high records for the year was established by such issues as American Express, Associated Dry Goods, J. I. Kinney & Co., William Wrigley, Public Service of New Jersey, Fleischmann Co., Royal Dutch, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio preferred, Illinois Central and Utah Copper, the gains ranging from small fractions to nearly 5 points.

Strong points also developed in the chemical and sugar issues. In the oil group, Shell Union preferred dropped 1⅝ and Producers & Refiners 1. Call money opened at 2 per cent.

In trading on the Boston Stock Exchange, Calumet & Arizona sold up over a point, while Utah Copper was down a point. There were fractional gains for Waltham Watch preferred, Warren Bros., Old Dominion and United Fruit.

AUTO OUTPUT INCREASING

OPTIMISM FELT BY BANKERS

An upswing in automobile production will be shown in the last ten days of July. Output for the month is likely to be slightly less than for June, however, because many plants were closed for inventory or "vacations" in the first half, says Motor Weekly Survey of Trade Conditions.

Somewhat better sentiment in car manufacturing circles is reflected in the releases given parts and accessory makers for relatively small quantities of materials. Increased schedules will be confined to those companies which have made greatest progress in clearing up surplus stocks accumulated early in the year.

Dealers in a good many lines still have substantial supplies on hand and are still factory warehouses are empty. Most of the new models announced thus far have embodied changes in power plants rather than the usual improvement and refinement of old lines.

Retail sales this month have been slightly better than in June in most sections and they are averaging only about 20 per cent. less than last year.

FORD MOTOR SETS NEW SALES RECORD

Ford Motor Co. made a new sales record in the first half of 1924 with total of 1,074,227 cars, trucks and tractors, including Lincoln cars. Sales of cars and trucks reached 1,060,076, an increase of 16 per cent. over the previous record in the first six months of 1922. Deliveries of tractors amounted to 14,151, about the same rate as a year ago, but June sales were 20 per cent. more than in June last year.

WOOLWORTH TRADE WITH GERMANY UP

Hubert T. Parson, president of F. W. Woolworth Co., sailing for Europe, said the company's volume of business this year might run over $215,000,000, which he stated, was a conservative estimate. The first three weeks of July showed a gain of $1,500,000 over last year. The company was doing about four times as much business with Germany as last year, he said.

MUMFORD SEES FRENCH HOPE OF U. S. AID

BY FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

I have from President George S. Mumford of the Commonwealth National Bank an interesting letter embodying his views on the expected readjustment in Europe, the basis of at least a large prospective flow of better feeling now felt regarding the copper shares.

George S. Mumford

He suggests that actual peace in Europe will stimulate the demand for copper.

Mr. Mumford says:

"After all, the fact remains, that no one however able and experienced, can foretell what the outcome will be as to when the payment of the total reparations will be completed by this or that generation. Assuming that a period that could be named would be so many generations in the future as to be of little practical value, because she is more interested in the question of her safety than in receiving payments on account, France is not going to surrender the security she has obtained by the occupation of the Ruhr, unless she is assured that the Dawes plan will be strictly observed by all Frenchmen as the natural and only safe boundary line between Germany and France. Abandoning this existing government in France can only spar for time. It will point out that there is no guarantee that after many years after accepting the Dawes plan will strictly observe her obligations under it; that its terms can be changed, and that, should the reparation payments are not in accord with the terms prescribed by the Versailles Commission, etc.

"That question of French safety still remains the most critical problem for statesmen to solve. It impelled England from wise motives of self-interest, and later the United States to enter the World War. It would influence the latter country to do so again, if France were again attacked. England has agreed to guarantee France against attack and France wants the United States also to join in this guarantee.

"Should the present Dawes plan involving the implied agreement to observe the Versailles Treaty and in due course to withdraw her troops from the Ruhr, be abandoned, it would be more or less equivalent to the expectation, and because she confidently believes, although without any promise to that effect, that if Germany should again attack her, the United States would be certain to come to her help as she did in 1917."

THE WORLD IS YOUR OYSTER

almost—if you own an automobile. Winding, shady roads, sunset views from mountain top or seashore are as inviting and wonderful from one car as from another. It's simply a question of which make you prefer—whether you'd rather save a little, buy an older car and have it reupholstered after you've paid for the Winter coat. The American tells you which used cars are good. We have them inspected and passed upon by an expert before we allow them to be advertised. If fresh air, cooling breezes and your family's health mean anything to you, look over this list of splendid bargains in INSPECTED-INSURED USED CARS and make your first easy payment on one of them TODAY.

S. S. Boston Wreck Teaches Vital Lessons

The Internal Revenue Department at Washington is reported to have clamped the lid down in connection with its inquiry into the collision between the passenger steamer Boston and the oil tanker Swift Arrow, which resulted in loss of four lives.

The inquiry is scheduled to start this week in Providence. It is to be conducted by officials of the Federal steamboat inspection service, a branch of the Internal Revenue Department.

That midnight crash in a fog in the thickly navigated waters off Point Judith, narrowly escaped being another sea horror.

It taught lessons of public interest.

One was the necessity for regular and rigid inspection not only of live-saving equipment of which there was ample of the most up-to-date type on the new steamer Boston, but of the capability of crews to handle such equipment in emergency.

Another lesson, repeatedly demonstrated in the wrecking of coastwise passenger steamers, notably in the loss of the steamer Portland, is the necessity for duplicate passenger lists, one to be retained aboard by the purser and the other to be left ashore at the home office.

Accurate listing becomes of the greatest importance in time of accident.

The captains and crews of both craft have been summoned as witnesses. The wisdom of not divulging official facts prematurely and the danger of working injury to either party involved, is apparent on its face, but there are other elements in a mishap of this nature about which the public is entitled to know.

Iron-clad secrecy, real or simulated, is apt to arouse suspicion. The public is likely to suspect that the steamboat inspection service has something to conceal.

The open-door policy is safest in such matters.

Law Favors Prizefighters Over Woman and Babe

Just the other day, Mrs. Filomena Barbara of Somerville returned after visiting her parents in Italy.

In her arms she brought a baby boy born to her in her mother's home. Although she was reared in Cambridge, the law ruled that the baby, born in Italy, was Italian. He was barred. So was she, for accompanying him.

It is true that influence was brought to bear. Ultimately the young American mother and her "alien" son were admitted.

That did not affect the principle of the proceeding. To many fathers and mothers themselves, it seems absurd, and even cruel.

But immigration laws can be very lax sometimes, and immigration officials very kind. In the case of a prize fighter, for instance.

Just the other day, also arrived Luis Angel Firpo. His claim to fame is that he, with William Harrison Dempsey, once engaged in the bloodiest and most ferocious prize fight of modern times. With him was a young woman referred to euphemistically as a "stenographer."

She was sent back.

He is allowed to enter. It is his ambition to engage in other bloody prize fights, and, incidentally, to harvest a fortune of American dollars.

Also, we have with us Mr. Silci, an interesting Senegalese, who is not more than two generations from out and out savagery. He, too, is a prize fighter, as brutal as Firpo, but not as clever; nor so good a business man. While among us he took to himself a wife, and so it was disclosed that when he left the Parisian boulevards Mr. Battling Silci left behind a wife and a helpless babe, with no money in the house to pay the rent.

Is Mr. Silci deported? He is not. He is treated like a visiting potentate.

The law which said Mrs. Barbara and her gurgling little "alien" were undesirables has no such feeling toward the brutal Argentine or the half wild negro from the Senegal. It is an interesting point of view.

Nevertheless---

Truth Will Last

Dr. Fosdick, whose religious views brought him to trial before the church here, comes back from Europe saying that all England is "modernist," clergymen interpreting the Bible in the light of present scientific information and "treating evolution as an accepted fact."

That will shock William J. Bryan and many others, but it is true the learned and Reverend Mr. Inge can remain dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London and at the same time teach that one of the greatest apostles, when supposed to be inspired, was in reality suffering from epilepsy.

The layman, who knows nothing about the intricate controversies, knows this much at least: NOTHING CAN INJURE ETERNAL TRUTH. And sooner or later we shall know what that eternal truth is.

No Personalities

Mr. Butler, manager for President Coolidge, says that he is perfectly willing, if the other candidates want it, "to base the campaign on the personality of the candidates."

What is the NEED of a personality fight in such a campaign as this? The six candidates for President and Vice-President are, PERSONALLY, clean, honest, able men.

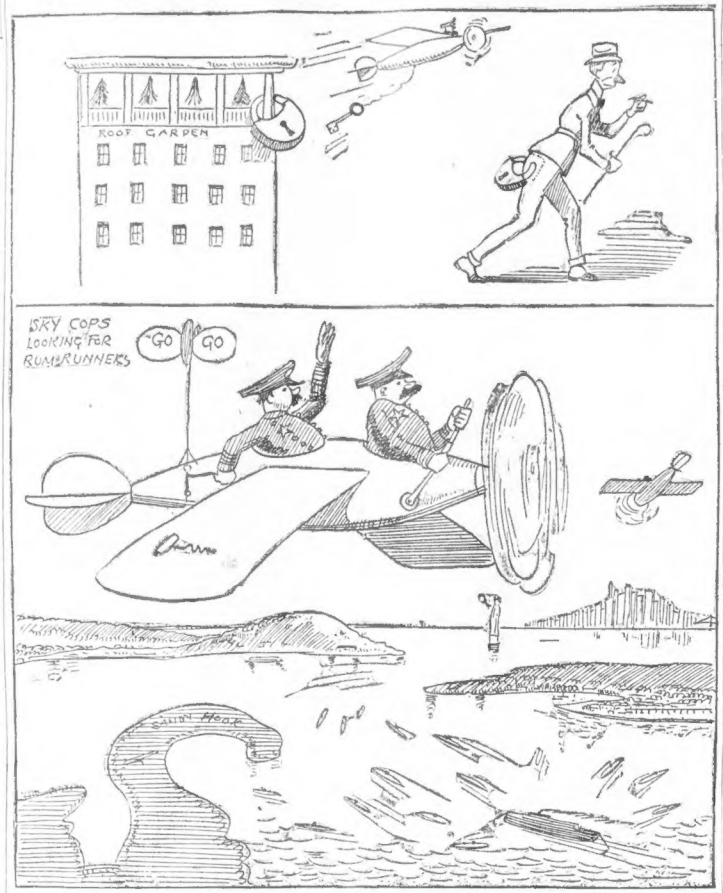
It is for them to tell voters, through newspapers, radio and public speeches, what they will do if elected, and for the voters to decide which of the three Presidential and Vice-Presidential pairs they prefer.

Sky Cops and Padlocks -:- By T. E. Powers



MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

"ALAS, alas," waileth the Bachelor, "what hath become of the sweet, old-fashioned VAMP, who made glad the days and brightened the evenings of a man's life?

"For lo, the world is full of 'baby-vamps' in synthetic evening gowns and bobbed hair. But these are as innocuous as soft drinks served openly, while SIKE was as strong wine served in a teacup!

"Yea, she of the pearl powder and the long earrings and the Mona Lisa smile apparently hath vanished from the face of the earth as completely as the bright lights of the corner cafe!

"For now do the elderly damsel seek to look like innocent sixteen, even though she be wiser than SIXTY; and she doth not advertise her vampishness, nor herald her deadliness.

Helen Rowland

"She scorneth the old traps and despiseth the old snares, and regardeth even FLIRTATION as an antique institution and a waste of time!

"Go to! The damsel with the bobbed hair and the abbreviated skirt and the bobbed soul is the Spirit of the Age.

"Her middle name is 'Frankness,' and her slogan concerning everything from clothes to love, is 'Make it short and SNAPPY!'

"Her glance is cool and steady.

"Her ways are the ways of Captain Kidd, and only by open struggling doth a bachelor escape her. For she hath a downright manner, an upright soul, and outright clothes; and dodging doth not dismay her!

"But the 'sweet, old-fashioned' vamp was as a marvel wave, all curves and intricacies and complexities and softness and subtlety.

"She went not clad in knickers, and her draperies clothed her with mystery, and a man's fancy, and left something to his imagination.

"Yea, verily, whatsoever her shortcomings, she kept him GUESSING!

"And what is love, save a 'guessing game,' which is ended, with the finding of the ANSWER to the riddle of woman?"

Thus walleth the Bachelor. Yet, I say unto thee, my Daughter, when vamps were in vogue did not man revile them and sigh for the "sweet, old-fashioned vixen?"

Yea, verily, for every new pose of woman is a new shock unto them! And there is no PLEASING them!

Once-Overs

CONTROL OVER SELF.

How much control have you over yourself?

Do you get wrought up every time an automobile driver does something foolish, causing you to make a quick and strenuous effort to avoid an accident?

If something in your home has been moved from its accustomed place, do you fly into a rage when you cannot find it at once?

If you have to wait a few minutes longer than you anticipated for someone to get ready to go out with you, do you become irritable?

It is foolish to go through life allowing yourself to be annoyed by trifles.

Does any good ever come to you from these outbursts of temper?

Such tyrannical outbursts become more frequent as time goes on.

There is such a thing as "righteous indignation," and there are occasions when to remain placid would be as foolish as to have "temper fits."

But your angry paroxysms are not occasioned by anything like "righteous indignation"—you simply let an evil temper get the better of you.

You cannot keep friendship, and at the same time fly "off the handle" every time you are displeased.

Thank you for your generous donation. We are sending this to Mrs. K. G. as you request.

Summer Things for Girls

Helping Hand Editor:

I have quite a lot of Summer things for girl between 12 and 14-2, and a wrapper for woman, size 38. If you could send the address of a family with girls in or around Boston that would call and pick out what they wanted, I would pay a 10-cent car fare, so there may be something left for someone else. MRS. M. D. H.

Thank you. We are asking Catherine, who is a little orphan, to call for the girl's clothing and Mrs. Z. for the wrapper and anything else you wish to give away.

Ready to Wear

Helping Hand Editor:

I have some shirt waists and skirts (all laundered, ready to put right on, three of each, white), also some other things. The clothes are large size, 44 to 46. Am home before 9 a. m. or after 8 p. m. daily.

MRS. F. J.

Thank you. We are asking Mrs. W. A. D. E., Boston, to call for these things. Her husband will never be able to work again on account of having had two shocks.

Orphan Girl Needs Home

Helping Hand Editor:

I wonder if it would be possible through your column to find a home for a little orphan girl seven years of age. She has been living with me practically since she lost her mother and father, but I find that I am unable to give her the proper care since my family is now enlarged by the addition of two babies, and I would appreciate it if you would kindly print this letter in hopes of finding some lonesome couple who would enjoy the company of a healthy, bright little girl.

Couple Needs Help

Helping Hand Editor:

I noticed your appeals for different folks in your paper and I would like to make a request to see if you would help us in some way. I don't ask for anything but work. We are strangers here in Boston and came here because my wife has always been sickly, but she has been doing very nicely here, but had to go to work, and I really feel ashamed to see her work every day and I can't help her at all. I have tried and tried every day to find something to do, but all in vain. I am getting discouraged; so is my wife, and I don't blame her. I am willing to work day or night at reasonable salary.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON SUPERIOR COMPLEX

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THERE has been a good deal said about the inferiority complex and it is doubtful whether it is not accountable for a good deal of the crime of passion and envy.

The murder of young Franks, however, in Chicago, reveals the possibilities of the superiority complex held by his murderers.

Both Leopold and Loeb were bright scholars and all the evidence seems to be that they considered themselves, particularly Leopold, as superior persons and far enough removed from the commonalty to regard them as merely subjects of experiment. Leopold had experimented considerably with birds, insects and lower animals, and seems to have regarded himself as a mere superior bystander in the affairs of men.

"It was the kind of thing there would be a thrill in and we wanted some easy money," said Leopold. "We made a few mistakes. I should have picked up my glasses. I didn't know I dropped them. We thought that we had the whole thing airtight, but it wasn't. That's all."

His companion in crime, Richard Loeb, has slowly slipped from his lofty pinnacle in the ethereal spaces of self-conceit. He is no longer the sure-footed, well-poised steeplejack, scaling the spires of a vagrant imagination and from them glancing downwards to laugh at the clumsy efforts of policemen bent on learning who kidnaped and killed Robert Franks. He seems to have lost his nerve and become jumpy.

The fact is that no one can separate himself from the human masses without perversion. No one can become the enemy of society without society taking its revenge upon him.

Each of the criminals accuses the other, but both are ready to acknowledge complicity in the crime.

Two things seem to have been the operating motives of these boys, two things that are common enough: greed and the spirit of adventure. They were out for a prank and had come to regard the lives of their fellow human beings as of no account compared to their own amusement. And they thought they would make some easy money. Their case has broken down and their condition is pitiable. Even more pitiable is that of their relatives. Just as no man succeeds without carrying others up with him so no man goes down without carrying others down with him. The sufferings of the families of the two boys must be great.

Their crime, however, was peculiarly atrocious. They slew a bright, innocent fellow in the heyday of his youth in an automobile in the midst of a heavily traveled street. First they hit him on the head with a chisel and afterwards they insured his death by choking him with a gag. In addition to this they put acid on his face in an effort to disfigure him so that his identity would be destroyed.

There can be no excuse of poverty in their action, for both boys were sons of well-to-do parents and received from them a liberal allowance. Ransom and the adventure of crime were the motives for the deed.

In removing from its pale the two murderers, there should be no vengeance displayed by society, but only the desire to protect itself by the administration of strict justice.

Altogether it seems to be an instance of the superiority complex and of the unreliability of the intellect as a substitute for the natural instincts of mankind.

"It is as easy to justify such a death," said Leopold, "as it is to justify an entomologist for impaling a beetle on a pin."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON FLAMMARION

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

IN his eighty-third year Camille Flammarion, the most popular of French astronomers, tells through an interview a brief story of his life. It is that of a man who during two ordinary human generations has occupied his whole time with the stars and other celestial objects, and with the endeavor to have others share his interest and delight in them. He has succeeded so well that his name should stand on a level with that of the highest in his country and in his time.

"Since I was five years old," says he, "I have worked regularly ten hours every day."

What was the beginning of that ceaseless activity? Flammarion points it out in very characteristic phrase:

"You ask me, sir"—(he is speaking to one of his countrymen)—"what is my earliest recollection of my youth. Behold it. I was then only five years old, but I recall it as if it were but of yesterday. It is one of the most striking recollections of my childhood. It was the first time, perhaps, that I had looked at the sky with a sense of (comprenant) its innumerable mysteries. It was the first time that I had asked myself where we were on this earth."

Tried to Help

He has since caused millions to ask themselves that question, and tried to help them answer it; that is why he has worked ten hours a day all his life. That, too, according to what he told the interviewer, is the secret of his long life and health and of the longevity of his mental activity. He is right. The mind stagnates without action. Man was merely a base animal, as sybaritic as a cat, as long as he dwelt in the cool shades of Eden. When the Lord drove him out and forced him to work He made a real man of him.

Flammarion's parents were cultivateurs (farmers), and although he made a very brilliant start in school, he had to quit it when his father lost their little property. But he never stopped studying! He worked for the common life of the family by day; at night he worked to nourish and satisfy his mind.

When he was only sixteen he fell ill from overwork. A Dr. Fournier was called. Incidentally, he discovered that the sick boy knew Latin, mathematics, astronomy, and had written a manuscript book of 100 pages on "universal cosmology," and that the dream of his life was to work in an observatory. The doctor was an intimate friend of Le Verrier, the great astronomer, and thus was able to get his patient a place in the Observatory of Paris.

Won Fame

In a few years young Flammarion had published astronomical works that won fame. When at twenty he entered the army to serve his term, as all French boys must, they asked him if he was "the son of the great Flammarion!" There are not many who have enjoyed an experience like that.

Flammarion is a remarkable example of precocity not degenerating. When he was only seven he wrote a little book on the signs of the zodiac. He treasures a book of the Gospels, on the first page of which appears in the small hand of a child:

"Ce livre appartient a Camille Flammarion, 1847." (This book belongs to Camille Flammarion, 1847.) He was born in 1842.

Flammarion told this story to his questioner:

"One day, when I was seven, the prefet came to the school with the Board of Examiners. He asked permission of the instructor to question the pupils, and added: 'What part of the program do they know best?'

"'Monsieur le prefet,' replied the instructor, 'here you can put all the questions you please, for there is one who is capable of answering them all.'

"'Indeed!' said the prefet, 'and who is this youthful savant?'

"'Camille Flammarion!' called out the instructor, and reddening with pleasure, I mounted the platform and stood beside him."

Camille Flammarion has always tried to impart his knowledge and the spirit of his studies to all who read. His science knows no snobbishness.
